Strange Curiosity.
One Billion for Farmers.
Nine Will Die Together.
The French Know.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

CURIOSITY, an important, useful part of human nature, you meet in various forms, through history and literature. There was the man who had one eye blasted, because he foolishly peeked when Godiva rode through the streets, the lady in Lohengrin who might have been happy ever afterwards if she had taken Lohengrin's advice not to question him, and the lady of Shalott, who grew tired of shadows.

There was Eve, who couldn't help wondering why it was so important not to eat the apple, and let her curiosity win, when the serpent added his argument to her curiosity.

All these you understand, but you are puzzled by Louis Kenneth Neu, tried for murder in New Orleans. He requested a deputy sheriff to introduce him to Henry Meyer, New Orleans professional hangman. Said Mr. Neu:

"I want to meet him socially, before I meet him officially."

That may be the real American "get together" spirit, but wishing to meet "socially" the gentleman who is going to hang you later, would seem to be a new high mark in sociability.

MR. WALLACE, the Secretary of Agriculture, has cheering information.

Receipts of farmers have increased during the past year one thousand million dollars and that does not include three hundred million dollars earned by farmers for reducing crops, plowing under cotton, refraining from wheat planting, etc. Only results count, and apparently the President is getting them.

SECRETARY WALLACE "indorses controlled inflation, as a means of promoting social justice, through fairer distribution of national income."

Some will ask just what IS controlled inflation? And exactly what is "SOCIAL JUSTICE?"

This nation is not made up of two classes, an upper, that inflicts social injustice, and a lower, that endures the injustice.

The very rich man of yesterday is the poor man of today jumping out of the window. The individual suffering "social injustice" of five years ago may now be managing a gold mine.

Wouldn't it be a good idea simply to encourage ability now as in the past, with adequate rewards, while arranging by "inflation" or any other contraption, not to let any starve, regardless of ability, if they are willing to work?

ON FEBRUARY 9, nine Negroes, including one woman, will be executed by order of the Alabama Supreme Court, affirming nine convictions.

The mass execution, while it does not mean one-tenth as many as the explosion of a single shell might mean in the big war, raises again the question of capital punishment.

There is nothing to be said in defense of the convicted murderers. The woman especially was guilty of murderous animal brutality.

The important question is whether or not capital punishment in cases of ordinary crime really discourages murder, or rather promotes it.

The ignorant criminal seeing government itself committing legal murder, when angry or offended, might well ask:

"Why should not I, also, commit illegal murder, when I am angry or offended?"

POSSIBLY THE execution of innumerable criminals, in ancient days, when men and children were executed for what today would be called petty theft, have gradually improved the human race, along lines of the Darwinian "survival of the fittest" rule, reversed.

Among animals the "fittest" are those that can kill the others, while they survive. Among human beings the fittest are those that refrain from killing others. The law permits them to survive.

Has capital punishment for thieves as well as murderers gradually eliminated murderous strains among human beings? Do statistics answer that question?

THE FRENCH "Black Squadron" of 28 army fighting planes is flying back from North Africa across the Mediterranean to France.

This is not particularly good news for Mr. Hitler or anybody who objects to French domination of western Europe. If a "Black Squadron" of 28 planes can fly over the Mediterranean Sea and far over Africa on a "test flight of inspection," lasting weeks, what could one or two thousand of the gigantic French air fleet do on a different kind of flight to the cities of an enemy country?

It is no exaggeration to say that if France declared war on

BARDOLPH CONVICTION VOIDED

LINDYS BACK IN U.S., ARRIVE IN MIAMI AFTER LONG HOP

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 16.—(AP.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh alighted here at 1:06 p. m. today to complete the last link in an aerial odyssey that began more than five months ago.

Col. Lindbergh set his large red hydro-monoplane dwon on the waters of the International Airplane Base after flying the 900 miles from San Pedro, Dominican Republic, in six hours and 33 minutes.

A cheer rolled up from the watchers as the big plane was sighted in the southern sky. Over familiar waters, Lindbergh circled the base for favoring wind and then brought the ship down smoothly.

A huge crowd lined the waterfront, with the spectators good-

ROBERT CHAMBERS, NOTED WRITER, DEAD

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—Robert W. Chambers, noted author and artist, died in Doctors' Hospital early today following an operation performed several days ago for an intestinal ailment.

Mr. Chambers, who was 68, had been in the hospital nearly three months and three days ago underwent an operation.

The author of many thrilling and historical fiction works will be buried in Broadalbin, N. Y., where he has a large estate.

Chambers was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., and started to be a painter, studying at the Julien Academy and L'Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris.

But painting was not to be his means of expression, and his fertile imaginati demanded the printed page as a means of outlet. So in 1893 he published "In the Quarters," the first of a long and popular series of novels and works of fiction that brought him wide fame.

The titles of his works exceed three score, marking him not alone as one of the outstanding American novelists, but one of the most prolific.

His works include fiction, historical adventure, sociological novels, verse, plays and children's books of the outdoors. In the latter years of his life his historical novels were widely printed by American periodicals and were the works which brought him most note.

(One of Mr. Chambers' outstanding historical novels is "Operator 13," now appearing serially in the Sun-Telegraph.)

VANCE, 'LONE WOLF' AUTHOR, DIES IN FIRE

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Louis Joseph Vance, noted novelist and creator of "The Lone Wolf," was burned to death today in a room in the town house, 108 East Thirty-eighth street.

His body was found lying on the floor beside a smouldering chair.

He was identified by copies of his books in the room and by a gold cigaret case and gold key ring.

It is believed he may have suffered a heart attack while sitting in the chair and smoking a cigaret. Ashes were found to indicate that he had been smoking.

Vance, 54, was born in Washington, D. C.

His first book, "Terence O'Rourke, Gentleman Adventurer," was published in 1905.

"Who's Who" lists him as having married Nance Elizabeth Hodges, of New York, in 1898. He had no children.

He contributed almost innumerable stories and articles to American and English magazines and in 1914 wrote the book which brought him his greatest fame—"The Lone Wolf."

Only recently he wrote the last of several sequels to "The Lone Wolf," "The Lone Wolf Returns."

JURY OUT 49 HOURS AWARDS MAN $45,000

A jury which deliberated 49 hours, believed a record in a damage case, today returned a verdict for $45,000 for Reater Athas, of the South Side, against the Fort Pitt Brewing Company.

Two nights the nine male members of the jury had slept on chairs.

The three women members had comfortable beds in the dormitory. Nevertheless, one of the three, Grace R. Wallace, of Homestead, became ill. She was excused by the court and by consent of counsel for both sides the 11 remaining jurors were permitted to return a verdict.

It was the second trial of the case, a retrial having been ordered by the State Supreme Court from a $15,000 verdict originally found for the plaintiff.

Athas contended his back was broken July 18, 1927, when a scaffold from which he was painting the Anderston street bridge of the Pennsylvania Railroad was struck by a brewing company truck, causing him to fall.

17 RESCUED, 2 DIE AS SHIP BURNS AT SEA

HALIFAX, N. S., Dec. 16.—(AP.)—Seventeen seamen of the American fishing schooner Ellen T. Marshall were rescued today, two were known drowned and seven were missing after the schooner burned near Seal Island, 18 miles west of Cape Sable, N. S.

The Danish steamer Lars Fruse rescued eight of the survivors from their lifeboats, eight more made Pease's Island safely and one got ashore on Seal Island.

The schooner was abandoned by her crew of 26 at 7 p. m. last night when she burned to the water's edge. The crew escaped the flames in eight dories.

Husband Free In Triangle Slaying

BEAVER, Pa., Dec. 16.—James M. Crawford, 51, of Conway, was acquitted of a murder charge today in the killing of his wife as she returned home late at night with another man.

The jury returned its verdict at the opening of court this morning. Charged by the court late yesterday, it reached an agreement at 11 o'clock last night.

Mrs. Crawford was wounded fatally early in the morning of October 25 as she was alighting from an automobile driven by Robert T. Jackson, of Beaver Falls. Jackson testified he had driven her home from a party at the home of Mrs. Hattie St. John, New Brighton.

The defense claimed the shooting was accidental. Crawford said he returned home unexpectedly from Canton, O., where he was employed, to find his wife absent. He waited until her return and carried the revolver to the street in order to apprehend the automobile driver.

The defense asserted he fired when the driver started the automobile, and Mrs. Crawford was thrown from the running board. The bullet struck her as she fell, Crawford said.

5,305 HERE TAKE RUM STORE JOB TEST

Brows of 5,305 applicants for state liquor store jobs were wrinkled today in the largest civil service examination Pittsburgh has known.

Some were plainly flabbergasted. Others thought the examinations were easy.

A youthful-appearing applicant who took the test for truck drivers in Schenley High School commented:

"Gee, they must think you have to be a college professor to drive a truck. I never heard of some of those words."

A somewhat more mature driver who had taken the same test remarked:

"Any eighth grade pupil should pass the test 100 per cent—except I forgot all the arithmetic I knew."

The tests were held in five high

BOOTLEG ARMISTICE URGED TO GET TAXES

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—A tentative proposal for a government armistice on bootleggers, during which they could transfer their huge stocks of illicit liquors to the so-called whisky trust, today drew sharp opposition from Congressional leaders.

The proposal was advanced as a "feeler" by one high administration official. It was prompted by the government's intense desire to drive the bootlegger out of business and increase the greatly restricted stores of legitimate liquor dealers.

One Congressional authority estimated the bootleggers now hold between 40 and 50 million gallons of illicit liquor. Government officials placed the quantity at a far lower figure.

The proposal would enable the government to collect a huge sum in taxes—as high as 100 million dollars if the federal tax is $2 a gallon and the bootleggers' supply is as large as is estimated by the Congressional authority. The lowest revenue estimate probably would be three to five million dollars.

U. S. WINS INSULL IN WINE TRADE DEAL

International News Service.

ATHENS, Dec. 16.—An international political battle, involving the export of Greek wines and spirits to the United States, developed in Greece today as a result of the government's decision to deport Samuel Insull, 74-year-old former utilities magnate under indictment in Chicago.

In judicial circles there was illfeeling on the part of many who openly declared the government's action in requesting Insull to leave the country by January 31 impaired the national prestige. They interpreted it as a concession to persistent American demands despite two previous rulings of the Greek Supreme Court refusing extradition.

Government supporters, on the other hand, declared the action will improve Graeco-American relations and may lead to a larger export of Greek liquors to the United States. They hailed it as a wise move.

Insull, meanwhile, remained at home and declared he was indisposed. It was possible that his departure from Greece might be delayed on account of his health.

EX-BANK HEAD WINS APPEAL IN STATE HIGH COURT

The conviction of C. A. Bardolph, president of the defunct Franklin Savings and Trust Company, sentenced to two years in jail following conviction of making 11 false entries, was set aside today by the Superior Court.

In a four-to-three decision, Judge Thomas J. Baldridge wrote an opinion reversing the local Quarter Sessions Court, according to word received by officials of the court here.

Bardolph also had been sentenced to pay $1,000 fine in the local court. He was arrested with others following the crash of the bank. The crash occurred in September, 1931, and following it came revelations of unsecured city money deposited there by former City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley, who since has died.

Concurring in the Baldrige opinion were Judges Trexler, James and Parker.

A dissenting opinion was filed by Judges Stadtfeld, Keller and Cunningham.

Bardolph had never gone to jail, being free on $5,000 bond pending his appeal. Herman Friedman and David Kellerman were also indicted at the time.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park said he had no comment, and could not tell what course he would pursue until he got the opinion, which probably will be early next week.

WEIR GIRDS FOR NRA LABOR VOTE ACTION

Equipped with an "eavesdropper's" record of a telephone conversation with Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, E. T. Weir today awaited threatened prosecution as an NRA violator.

The chairman of the Weirton Steel Company revealed he put the General on record when they discussed the company's defiance of the National Labor Board by telephone between Washington and Pittsburgh. He said:

"I had the entire telephone conversation with Gen. Johnson taken down and transcribed and will be prepared to show when the time arrives exactly what the General said."

Weir maintained the company is upholding the National Recovery Act, and that the Labor Board has no right to interfere with the company union's election.

Department of Justice men were carrying to Attorney General Cummings at Washington reports on the election in the mills at Weirton and Clarksburg, W. Va., and Steubenville, O., yesterday. These were to be used in whatever action the government may take against Weir.

While company officials asserted the employes voted of their own free will for collective bargaining representatives, officials of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers said they had many affidavits from the workers asserting they had been coerced and intimidated.

The Amalgamated and the Labor Board wanted an election by petition of the workers. The bal-

YOUNG EPPY PAYS UP AND ESCAPES JAIL

Henry H. (Young Eppy) Epstein, today dug up $4,179.65 in cash to save himself from going to jail for four months. He had been sentenced by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson for failure to make restitution for nicome tax evasion.

While Eppy was held in the Federal Building, his brother, Burford B. Epstein made a last-minute effort to raise the cash and shortly before 2 o'clock appeared with the money. Probation Officer George G. O'Brien, on advice of Judge Gibson, accepted the money and Eppy was released.

Epstein, a former pugilist, pleaded guilty in Federal Court February 5, 1932, to a charge of evading income tax of $5,679.65 in connection with a legitimate whisky transaction in 1927.

After paying $1,500 at once and costs, he was placed on probation for 18 months, with the stipulation that he must pay the balance of the tax in that period. At the expiration of the probation period, August 15, 1933, he came into court and asked more time in which to pay the balance.

MOB LYNCHES YOUTH RELEASED BY JURY

COLUMBIA, Tenn., Dec. 16.—(AP.)—A 20-year-old Negro, whom a grand jury refused to indict on a charge of attempted attack on an 11-year-old girl was lynched near here last night.

The body of the victim, Cord Cheek, was found suspended from a rope tied to the limb of a tree after Sheriff Claude Godwin said he received an anonymous telephone call advising that he would find a "dead Negro at the forks of the road" in the Glendale section nearby.

In response to a request to "come and get him," the Sheriff said he went to the place designated and found the body. Godwin said marks which appeared to have been made by bullets were found on the body and that the Negro apparently died shortly before the hanging.

The attempted attack on the girl, an orphan, was alleged to have occurred about a month ago in the section where the Negro was lynched. After the grand jury's refusal to indict, Cheek was released.

CRAWFORD'S FATE IN HANDS OF JURY

LEESBURG, Va., Dec. 16.—(AP.)—The question of the guilt or innocence of George Crawford, Negro, on trial for the murder of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley, Middleburgh, Va., sportswoman, was before a jury today in Loudoun County Circuit Court.

The state asked for the death penalty. The defense contended that if Crawford were found guilty and executed the "real murderer, Charlie Johnson," would never be apprehended.

BLUE EAGLE'S REIGN OVER TRADE TO BE EXTENDED

SEEK TO PLACE ALL BUSINESS UNDER CODES

President to Fight on In Campaign for Re-Employment

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—NRA's Blue Eagle will continue to fly after December 31, and a program soon will be announced to extend the President's re-employment agreement for the trades and industries which do not have codes in effect on that day.

The Blue Eagle agreements were sent out in August. Millions of businessmen signed their names in a promise to comply with the higher wage, shorter hours requirements until the last day of the year when the agreements expire. They promised also to help get their trades organized for code purposes.

Today, many of those businessmen are under permanent codes. Thousands more probably will be by the end of the year. But there will remain uncoded industries.

The plan for continuance is not yet clearly formed. The simplest method is to proclaim, by regulation and public announcement, that continued display binds the employer to stick to the agreement terms, either until his code becomes effective or for a period fixed by the President.

An appeal to all employers to continue, and to the public to keep "buying under the Blue Eagle," would accompany this.

Another idea being studied is for distribution of new agreement blanks to get signatures all over again.

Where a code has been approved, it is proposed that new Blue Eagle emblems be sent out, bearing the words "Member Retail Code," or whatever code the displayer may belong to. Display of these would constitute voluntary subscription to the code on the part of the employer using it, and would bind him to compliance.

DRIVE FOR CUT IN CAR FARES LAUNCHED

Committee Formed in Battle for Trolley Changes

A committee to consider changes in the Pittsburgh transportation system started work today on a study of the practicability of obtaining lower street car fares under present contracts of the city with the Pittsburgh Railways Company.

The committee, formed to carry out the plans proposed by Mayor-elect William N. McNair, was organized yesterday, with Francis L. McFarren as acting chairman and Miss Ella Graubart, Leo I. Shapiro, Anthony A. Barrante and Ben T. Sigal as members.

All are attorneys representing various groups in the community.

SERVICE CHANGES

Faster service and a rerouting of the present system also will be considered, it was indicated.

The committee will meet Monday to complete its organization and formulate a complete program.

Meanwhile, McNair plans to break his self-imposed "period of silence" Monday long enough to introduce his "foe," Councilman-elect William A. Magee, slated as a speaker before the Hungry Club. Thursday he is to go to New York to attend a dinner of the American Association of Scientific Taxation.

HEALTH JOB

Although McNair has given no indication as to his cabinet appointments, the post of director of the City Department of Health, to be tendered to Dr. Irvin D. Metzger, East End physician, will be rejected, friends of Dr. Metzger said last night.

The appointment was said to have been suggested to the Mayor-elect by Joseph F. Guffey, Democratic state leader.

ENGLISH TO TRY TO COLLECT PAY CUT

Loses Motion to Set Up Fund Equaling Own Reduction

W. Y. English, chairman of the Finance Committee of City Council, has served notice on City Controller James P. Kerr that he will demand a full salary for 1933.

This would include the cut of 16⅔ per cent which all members of Council took last year along with other city employes at the time the budget was fixed. English was in Texas at the time Council voted on it.

In the midst of a budget-cutting session yesterday, English attempted to set up enough money to pay back the salary cuts of all the present Council in case the new Council did not submit to a similar reduction.

LOSES MOTION

Other members of Council refusing to go along, English moved to set up an amount equal to his own salary cut, or $1,333.33. His motion was lost, 5 to 2. He then announced to the Controller that he intends to collect.

Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, financial representative of Mayor-elect William N. McNair, made her first recommendation regarding the budget. She has asked a reduction of $100,000 in the city Bureau of Light to be brought about chiefly by reducing the candlepower of street lights and eliminating gas lights entirely.

Her report was referred to the Department of Public Works for comment.

TO CUT GAS LIGHTS

Council had previously agreed to eliminate the gas lighting contract of the Sunlight Illuminating Company within a period of a year, cutting out 25 per cent of the gas lights each quarter.

By turning back unused bond funds to the sinking fund, Council was able to achieve a $100,000 saving in sinking fund and interest charges.

A total of $291,500 has thus been taken out of the budget submitted by Mayor John S. Herron, chiefly in supplies, and next week Council will be ready to consider what is to be done with the payroll.

THE CUSTOMARY thing if you want a modern divorce is to accuse husband or wife of "mental cruelty," eliminating the unpleasant, old-fashioned charge of wife beating or husband poisoning.

Mr. Stafford, of Pittsburgh, thinks he has a mental cruelty case that ought to be worth two divorces. When he was married, his wife started away on her honeymoon without him, and what was worse, took his automobile to start.

Later she wrote she was sorry she could not return because she "was having too good a time."

7 OFFICES GIVE OUT CWA CHECKS

Back Wages to Be Distributed Next Week in City

Civil Works Administration paychecks were being distributed to city workers today at seven dispersing offices. Confusion and delay at the City-County Building last week caused officials to shift the payoff to districts near where employes live.

City workers paid today will be two weeks behind in salary. The task of arranging the growing payroll made the CWA Controller postpone payment of a double wage until next week. Wages will then be paid for work done between December 1 and 14.

James L. Stuart, county administrator, said the paymaster's office will try to get all salaries up to date by the following Saturday.

Among those to get CWA checks today are engineers on county projects and workers in the Weather Bureau and Carnegie Library. Paydays will be held next week in various localities: "Down river," Monday; eastern part of the county, Tuesday; McKeesport, Wednesday, and throughout the rest of the county on Thursday.

A. W. Motley, who took over the local employment bureau yesterday, is in Harrisburg today to supervise payroll work at state headquarters.

Although a successor to Harold F. Bucher, dismissed director, has not been named, it is said that he will be a man with no party affiliations. The labor board, according to a report, is seeking to avoid charges of political motives in removing Bucher.

Complaints of veterans against the employment service will be silenced, it is said, by adding a veteran representative to the office force. It is predicted that the American Federation of Labor will also have a member appointed to the bureau.

FORCED VOTE CHARGED

William J. Long, president of the Weirton local of the Amalgamated, said hundreds made affidavits yesterday that heads of departments forced them to vote. One man, he said, fractured a wrist when he fell while escaping from a foreman.

Long said these affidavits would be sent to Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the Labor Board. He added:

"In one affidavit alone there are 195 signers. We still invite a fair test, and if we are licked, we will take it with a smile."

John Larkin, chairman of the company union rules committee, said the voting exceeded all expectations. He said 9,317 employes out of a total of 11,430 eligible voters, cast ballots, showing 81½ per cent of the employes favored the company union plan.

The information was contained in a formal statement. There was no detailed accounting of the vote, and Larkin said he could not provide figures for the present.

With the landing, the flying Lindberghs returned to their homeland after a semi-vacation absence that began as an exploratory expedition of the North Atlantic islands in July. Later, completing their mission of surveying for a possible North Atlantic airline route, the couple visited many European countries.

Appearing from out of the almost cloudless sky, the Lindbergh plane was flying at approximately 2,000 feet when first sighted. The flying colonel brought the craft down to a few hundred feet above the water in a long sweeping glide before making his first circle.

Postal Employes Make Deliveries for Store

Extra Holiday Crews Move Goods Tied Up by Walkout

Postoffice employes have grappled the huge task of mailing parcels from Kaufmann's store during the Christmas rush as a result of a strike of truck drivers and helpers.

Part of the postoffice staff, including extra clerks engaged for the holiday season, was moved to the store to weigh and place stamps on packages to be sent by parcel post.

One hundred and sixty loads of parcel post matter had been hauled from the store to the Ferry street postal station last night. Mail trucks were used. Deliveries of larger packages were being made from the warehouses to purchasers by the American Railways Express.

A group of pickets near the North Side warehouse yesterday said they had struck to compel recognition of their union. Edgar J. Kaufmann, president of Kaumann Department Stores, Inc., made this statement:

"Kaufmann's is a party to the NRA code of fair competition for the retail trade as signed by the President of the United States. In accordance with our understanding of the spirit and intent of the code, we made the following written offer on December 14, 1933, to a committee claiming to represent a number of our drivers and helpers:

"'Kaufmann's stand ready to meet with any committee properly representing the drivers and helpers in accordance with Article IV, Section 1, of the retail code on or after January 1, 1934, to discuss any matters of grievance, wage or working conditions.

"'No man will be discharged or discriminated against in any way who has participated in Local Union No. 249, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

"'All negotiations will be subject to the retail code of the National Recovery Administration as signed by the President of the United States.'

"This committee has not accepted our offer and, because of this situation most of our helpers and drivers have not reported for work. We have arranged with the United States postoffice for the delivery of packages to our customers. Packages should reach our customers promptly. We shall endeavor to maintain in every particular the traditional Kaufmann service."

RETRIAL SOUGHT IN VOTE FRAUDS

Counsel for Thomas Dolan, judge; William Connolly and Mrs. Alice Daschbach, inspectors, of the election board of the Eighth District, Fourth Ward, convicted yesterday in Federal Court for conspiring to violate the election law, said a motion will be filed for a new trial.

Miss Ruth F. McCarthy, clerk, was acquitted. The jury deliberated seven hours and 20 minutes.

A retrial opens Monday for six members of the election board of the Ninth District, Third Ward, in whose case a jury deadlocked after 30 hours' deliberation.

The defendants are Mike Wendell, judge; Carman Bosco and Charles P. Betters, inspectors; James Stuhlfire and Louis D.

FUND IN SURING TEST ASKED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt hopes that outside of some minor changes the new federal law permitting insurance of bank deposits will be left alone long enough for a fair trial.

He suggested to officers of the American Bankers' Association that agitation for major modifications, if they had any in mind, be withheld for a time. Then he was informed by Walter J. Cummings, head of the Deposit Insurance Corporation, that this new agency would be ready to go January 1 on schedule.

From that date until July 1, deposits up to $2,500 will be insured 100 per cent, and those over that amount not at all. After July, 100 per cent insurance will apply on deposits up to $10,000, with 75 per cent up to $50,000 and 50 per cent on those over $50,000.

COUNTY RENEWS FUND SLASHING

With a net reduction of more than $45,000 chalked up, County Commissioners today were to renew their attack on the 1934 budget.

They face a requested budget total of $20,633,137 following two days' sessions.

After nearly $10,000 had been added Thursday, a $55,000 slash was the result of yesterday's deliberations. Of this figure, however, $9,000 to be transferred from the Clerk of County Court to Juvenile Court, represents no real saving.

So far expenses, exclusive of salaries, have been considered in 17 departments. Fifteen show net decreases.

Salaries must await the action of the salary board. Commissioner C. C. McGovern announced yesterday there would be no increases as far as he was concerned

Following Emperor Hirohito's formal approval of Saito's appointment, Foreign Minister Koki Hirota will ask his acceptance by the American government.

ACCORD ON TAX ISSUE SEEN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, predicted today a general revenue bill could be drawn that would suit both legislative and executive departments despite wide differences in plans proposed by the Treasury and a House committee.

Discussing the new suggestions made and the exceptions taken by Acting Secretary Morgenthau to the Ways and Means Sub-Committee's 39 proposals to tighten existing law against tax dodgers and simplify its administration, Doughton told newspapermen he did not regard the Treasury's counter proposals as a bar to an agreement.

Asked how J. P. Morgan and his partners could be reached if the Treasury recommendation against disallowing partners to charge off partnership losses against their ordinary individual incomes were followed, Doughton said:

"I am sure when we get through with this bill a condition of the kind disclosed by the banking investigation will be made impossible."

FIRE DESTROYS OGPU RECORDS

International News Service.

MOSCOW, Dec. 16.—Fire of suspected incendiary origin which gutted the two top stories of the Moscow headquarters of the Ogpu, Soviet secret police, destroyed all the local archives, it was learned today.

The fire occurred between 4 and 5 o'clock on the morning of December 3, but Soviet authorities refused to permit any news of it to be sent out of the country at the time. There was no loss of life.

(Editor"s note: A Berlin dispatch to the London Evening Standard, quoting a Warsaw radio dispatch, had reported many prisoners held in underground cells were believed to have perished in the blaze.)

Belief was expressed that the fire was incendiary in nature and was set by officers of the Ogpu who wished to destroy evidence against themselves which might be available for use in a forthcoming probe of the organization by Soviet authorities.

O'RYAN TO HEAD N. Y. POLICE

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—Mayor-elect LaGuardia today announced the appointment of Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan as police commissioner and John J. McElligott, present fire chief, as fire commissioner.

The appointment of O'Ryan was expected, but the naming of McElligott was a surprise, although he had been mentioned for the post.

As commissioner, McElligott, the first man chosen from the ranks in many years, will perform all the duties of fire chief, it was indicated today, and may even, if the law allows, retain his old post officially. The Mayor-elect said:

"He will be a fire-fighting commissioner, not a swivel chair commissioner.

"He will be right on the line with his old hat on."

STORM CLEARS ROADS OF ICE

December thundershowers had washed away the last vestiges of ice and snow in this district today, restoring normal travel conditions as moderate weather prevailed.

Last night's intermittent downpours totaled 66 hundredths of an inch. An icy film which had made auto travel dangerous late last night east of the mountains had largely cleared today, according to the Pittsburgh Motor Club and the only bad spots were in the mountains, where the snow and ice lingered.

Fair skies tonight will be accompanied by a temperature of about 35 degrees, Observer W. S. Brotzman predicted. Rain is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon and night with little temperature change.

Five hundred students of the University of Pittsburgh and Carnegie Institute of Technology were ready to begin marking the papers working under the NRA code in the basement of Syria Mosque. Four hundred high school teachers supervised the examinations.

Part of the routine was the taking of fingerprints.

State troopers guarded the doors of the schools and permitted only those to enter who showed their number cards. The questions were brought here last night from Harrisburg. Even Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent of schools, who had charge of the whole program here, didn't know what they were, he said.

This is the second site tentatively selected in the county. The other was in Coraopolis. There will be 21 stores in Allegheny County.

The Try Street Warehouse Company, of Pittsburgh, and the Union Storage Company, of Erie, have been designated to store and deliver liquor and wines to state stores, it was announced.

Huey Long Quits Society Over Soup Etiquette

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—Senator Huey P. Long has served notice to Louisiana, the press and the publishers of the Washington social register that he now is thoroughly "desocietified."

In a letter requesting the withdrawal of his name from the register, the senior Senator commented at length on the appearance of his name in the recently printed catalogue of the capital elite.

The plight of the authorities listing him here, he said, would be pitiful "when they are called to produce the credentials to show justification for listing me in the register."

In addition, Senator Long said he had been disappointed in Washington society. The city was "far behind in manners," he declared, telling of an incident at a banquet there when soup was served in a cup-shaped plate, with handles on either side. He said:

"I was so new to Washington one of the ladies at the table didn't think I would know anything about it. She leaned over to me and said: 'Governor, you can drink the soup out of this, you know.'

"My! My! How far behind in manners was that city. Why, in the country where I had come from I had been drinking the soup out of the plate 20 years before I ever heard of Washington, and without having any handles on the plate either."

Wild Parties Charged At Divorce Trial

Wild parties in which guests became intoxicated were alleged during the proceedings of Clarence E. Ryan, seeking a divorce from Irene A. Ryan, of 1190 Cedar boulevard extension, which she is contesting.

While a witness was explaining what went on at the Ryan home, one woman witness for Ryan laughed and Judge Elder W. Marshall, who is hearing the case, directed a tipstaff to order her from the court room. She walked out quietly and quickly left the building.

One of Ryan's witnesses was Jack Burke, a nephew of the late James Francis Burke. He told of having been ordered out of the Ryan home by the respondent at a dinner, and of Mrs. Ryan's having thrown mashed potatoes at her husband.

He said that a row in the dining room followed an argument as to where Ryan was to sit at the table. He went to the kitchen and did not see what went on in the dining room, but heard some of the dishes breaking, he said.

Witnesses for Ryan said that Mrs. Ryan was jealous of her husband. The wife charges her husband was a bootlegger

BURGLARS IGNORE CRAWFORD RICHES, LOOT MAIDS' ROOMS

UTILITY HEAD'S DOMESTICS LOSE $250

Woodlawn Road Home Rifled in Absence Of Family

Out in exclusive Woodland road, burglars are passing up the wealthy folk to prey on the maids, according to a report today to East End police saying two domestics in the home of George W. Crawford, utility magnate, had been robbed.

More than $200 in cash, a $50 Liberty bond and an English pound note were stolen.

A front door was smashed early last night in the absence of the family and servants. The burglar went to the servants' quarters on the third floor. Nothing was disturbed in other portions of the house, the report said.

From a bag belonging to Catherine Walsh, a maid, $191, the Liberty bond and the pound note were taken. Mary Flaherty, another domestic, lost a purse containing $33 cash. The burglary was discovered when a maid returned home, police were told.

Crawford is head of the Columbia Gas and Electric Company. His home district employs its own private police force.

YOUNG ASTOR, DEB ENGAGED

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—John Jacob Astor, the sixth member of the Astor family to bear that name, is engaged to marry Miss Eileen S. S. Gillespie, whose family is one of the oldest in New York.

The engagement was announced yesterday by Miss Gillespie's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence L. Gillespie, of New York and Newport. No date for the wedding was announced.

Astor, who inherited a $3,000,000 trust fund last August when he was 21 years old, is the son of the late John Jacob Astor, who perished in the Titanic disaster. His mother is the former Mrs. Madeline Astor Dick, now the wife of Enzo Fiermonte, Italian prizefighter. Young Astor is the lineal descendent of the John Jacob Astor who founded the Astor fortune.

MODEL, FIRED, DIES IN LEAP

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—Edith Babson, attractive dress model, who told friends she had lost her job yesterday because she "sent out for cocktails during working hours," leaped five stories to her death from a Greenwich Village apartment building last night.

As Miss Babson, a former showgirl and actress, ran up five flights of stairs to the roof, witnesses heard her cry out she was "cold and hungry." Her mother, Mrs. Helen Burney, with whom she lived, collapsed from shock.

Friends of the 25-year-old model said she was married in 1928 to Lester Baden, college chum and now secretary to Rudy Vallee. Baden is understood to be in Hollywood where Vallee is making a picture.

2 DIE AS AUTO, STREET CAR COLLIDE

3 Pitt Students Hurt As Machine Skids, Crashes Into Wall

Two men were dead today, victims of a head-on crash between an automobile and a street car in East Ohio street, near the Pittsburgh-Millvale boundary line, during the heavy rainfall last night.

They were George Breitenbach, 40, sheet metal contractor, of Seavey road, and Albert Eister, 34, auto mechanic, of 703 North avenue, both of Millvale.

The automobile, city-bound, apparently got out of control and collided head-on with a Millvale street car operated by Joseph B. Graham, of 811 Stanton avenue, Millvale, according to Homicide Detectives Thomas Donahue and Edward Scanlon. One of the front windows in the car was shattered, but Graham and more than two score passengers escaped injury.

STUDENTS IN CRASH

Two University of Pittsburgh students were in critical condition in Homeopathic Hospital today and a third less seriously injured as the result of an automoble skidding and crashing into a stone wall at 4761 Baum boulevard shortly after midnight.

Harry Garner, 23, of 5624 Woodmont street, and Patrick Fleming, 20, of 255 North Dithridge street, were seriously injured, the former suffering from a probable skull fracture and the latter a probable spinal fracture.

Paul Wright, 19, also of 255 North Dithridge street, was slightly injured.

Mrs. Mary Vetter, 62, and her daughter, Elvira, 22, of 202 Hazelwood avenue, were injured when struck by a car on Hazelwood avenue near Second avenue. The car was driven, police said, by Sidney Winkoff, 40, of Murray avenue.

TORCH MURDER TRIAL NEAR END

By HAZEL MACDONALD
International News Service.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Dec. 16.—Trial of Mrs. May Hanson for the torch murder of her divorced husband, Earl, a milling machine company executive, drew rapidly toward its close today with the possibility of a verdict by nightfall.

The defendant's attorney, John C. Goembel, was to make the final defense plea, to be followed by Prosecutor Robert Nash, who has accused Mrs. Hanson of showering her former husband with gasoline and touching a match to it.

The jury, it was said, will be instructed on the possible verdicts, "for straight murder or acquittal." Prosecutors have indicated that they would not consider asking the court to mention manslaughter in his instructions. Defense counsel have shown no willingness for compromise.

For these reasons, in the event of a conviction, the jury presumably will decide between the three punishments for the crime of murder: Death in the electric chair, imprisonment for the term of natural life or imprisonment for any term of years from 14 up.

WIFE OF STEEL MAN ROBBED

Mrs. Marjorie Booth, 38, wife of Thomas J. Booth, Pittsburgh steel manufacturer, reported to Chicago police that a well-dressed gunman had robbed her of gems valued at more than $4,000, leaving her bound and gagged on the bed after threatening her life.

Mrs. Booth said the man forced his way into her Chicago hotel apartment and tied her with a roll of adhesive tape after she refused to tell him where her valuables were kept. He found them in a dresser.

For a half hour the gunman menaced Mrs. Booth with a pistol and threatened to disfigure her face. He slapped her repeatedly and threatened to kill her.

After he departed, Mrs. Booth said she worked for almost an hour to free herself of the bonds.

Mr. Booth is vice president of the Columbia Steel and Shafting Company, at Carnegie. He has been in Pittsburgh since the first of the week.

Jones was burned to death yesterday when he fell asleep while smoking in bed. Several hours later Coroner's investigators found $8 in cash, a $66 check and securities valued at more than two hundred thousand dollars hidden about his charred bedroom.

First 100 Auto Tags Assigned by Governor

Few Changes Made in List of Holders of Low Numbers

HARRISBURG, Dec. 16.—Less than a dozen changes were made by the Governor's office in the assignment of the first 100 automobile licenses for 1934. The list of the favored group was made public today by the Governor's office.

Two of the changes in the list were brought about by a switch in the fiscal offices last May. Tags 3 and 4 annually are assigned to the Auditor General and State Treasurer, respectively. This year Charles A. Waters, of Philadelphia, carried the first tag on his car, and Edward Martin, of Washington, the latter.

Last spring Frank E. Baldwin, of Austin, Potter County, succeeded Waters and has been given No. 3 for next year, while Waters, who took Martin's place, was assigned No. 4. Martin, who also is Republican state chairman, has been given No. 35 by the Governor for next year. In 1933 that number was unassigned.

Six members of the Mellon family have retained the same low numbers for their cars in 1934 that they carried in recent years.

The Governor did not change the tag assignments to United States Senators David A. Reed and James J. Davis, both of Pittsburgh; William S. Vare, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania's Republican national committeeman; former Gov. John S. Fisher, of Indiana, and Supreme Court Justice William I. Shaffer, of Haverford. Two tags in the first 100 have been given to Senator Reed.

Leon D. Metzger, of Harrisburg, Secretary of Revenue, will carry No. 10 on his car instead of "M." His tag for next year formerly had been given to Dr. Clyde L. King ousted as chairman of the Public Service Commission. In his place on the commission the Governor named Herman J. Goldberg, of Wilkes-Barre, who was given No. 43 for 1934. This tag for 1933 had been given to Commissioner George W. Woodruff.

Pittsburghers and residents of Western Pennsylvania who drew numbers in the first 100 included:

22, David A. Reed; 26, W. L. Mellon; 27, O. M. Deibler, Greensburg; 29, Mary Flinn Lawrence, Sharpsburg.

33, Helen W. Mellon; 35, Edward Martin, Washington; 37, John S. Fisher, Indiana.

40, Duncan C. McCallum, Leechburg; 46, S. Ray Shelby, Uniontown; 48, A. W. Mellon; 49, Paul C. Wolff.

52, Jere C. West, Bedford; 53, Cyrus E. Woods, Greensburg; 57, R. B. Mellon; 58, W. D. Mansfield, Jr., McKeesport; 59, Richard K. Mellon.

62, Harriet D. Tener; 64, Helen E. Dale, Bellefonte; 65, W. J. Burchinal, Smithfield; 69, J. W. Lawrence.

83, J. Guy and Louise F. Griffith, New Kensington; 84, Mary S. Drew; 85, Edward B. Bennett, Indiana; 89, T. A. Mellon.

90, Plymouth W. Snyder, Hollidaysburg; 93, David A. Reed; 94, James J. Davis.

SEEK WITHERUP KILLERS' LAIR

FRANKLIN, Pa., Dec. 16.—(AP.)—Belief that Clark Witherup, 52, an oil lease operator, was slain by a bandit gang operating in Clarion County was still held today by authorities working on the case.

Witherup, who disappeared last Saturday night from his lease at Kennerdell, was found shot through the head Wednesday night. His ice-caked body, apparently thrown from a bridge, was face downward in a small stream near Shippenville.

Working on the theory that the guilty parties may have a "hangout" in this section, Sheriff E. M. Voorhies of Venango County and other officers toured remote sections of western Clarion County yesterday and visited huts and shacks lining the Allegheny River from Emlenton south to Parker. Beyond saying they discovered a "promising trail," the officers would not discuss their findings.

SLAIN DENTIST'S DIARY SHOWS MANY LOVES

Two Blondes Listed in Story of Romances; Confession Hoax

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 16.—(AP.)—The intimate diary of Dr. Leonard Siever, mysteriously slain Pasadena dentist, revealed today that he may have been killed for any of many reasons, police announced. The emotional history of the man disclosed him as a gay Lothario and zestful wooer whose pursuit of love led him into forbidden places and danger.

Led on a false trail by a woman who screamed a confession to the killing of Dr. Siever, and later retracted her statement, police turned again today to a study of the life of the dentist in hope of uncovering some clue to explain his death.

Love letters, hotel bills bearing witness to an amorous rendezvous with a married woman, and the diary, crammed with passionate phrases, were studied by authorities.

There were many women in the life of the 44-year-old Russian-born dentist, police said. The theory that jealousy prompted the killing was still uppermost as the investigation progressed.

WARNED BY WOMAN

Police announced they were without clues as to the identity of the young woman, described as an attractive brunet, who dashed breathlessly into the office of Dr. Siever an hour before he was slain, and held an excited, whispered conversation with him. It was apparent, the authorities stated, that the young woman sought to warn Dr. Siever of his impending fate.

The diary said:

"It is interesting that throughout my entire three years' stay in Ann Arbor as a student, in proximity of charming co-eds, beautiful boulevards and lovers' lanes, my life was minus any sort of romance, and, in a sense I am glad of it."

After jotting down the thought that "nature seemed to protect me," Siever said he had "one infatuation and one love." He named two women. The diary continued:

"Both cases were genuine, intense and had a touch of sadness to tears. One was a blonde co-ed at the University of Washington. She was intent on frivolity and that only, so it seemed to me, while my mind was pre-occupied with her as with no other person before.

SAYS BLONDE LIED

"She was fond of me, but seeing I was unduly attached to her she began to fall away. She found it easy to lie to me."

In referring to the other woman, whom he described as a "petite blonde of 103 pounds" and a graduate of an exclusive Pasadena school, Siever's diary said:

"We were engaged to be married. However, she did not discourage the numerous amorous letters she had been receiving from other boys. In fact, she was encouraging them and she would not tell them that she was engaged to me. We had many arguments over it. Finally I threatened one of her amorous boys and as a result she went East."

Under the heading "Trip East, 1923," Siever's diary said:

"A Miss S. tried to pick me up in New York. She was a model by profession, but we went only as far as ice cream soda.

"I do not cater to such individuals but I do like to converse with them."

MURDER FEAR REVEALED

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—The Chronicle says Miss Muriel Hansen, San Francisco dancer, disclosed that when she was engaged to Dr. Leonard Siever in 1926 the Pasadena dentist feared he would be murdered—a fate which overtook him Tuesday night. The paper quoted the dancer as saying:

"I always thought he had some fear of someone, and I remember him asking me once 'What would you think if you found me with my head chopped off, and lying in a pool of blood?' I told him jokingly I would keep on dancing.

"I remember another time after he had become engaged he told me he had a 'purple secret' and that he had made an awful mistake in his life."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 16.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Well, I see where the boss says things are going along as well as he expected, and that he is not going to stabilize the dollar. Now that will do just as much good as if he had said that he would, maybe more.

Will Rogers

Funny thing about the big men and financiers, after they have realized and got it set in their head they are not going to have their own way, like an old steer they sulk a little bit, and then join the herd.

Everybody likes to make a dollar his way, but if he finds he is not allowed to make it his way, why he is not going to overlook the chance of making it your way.

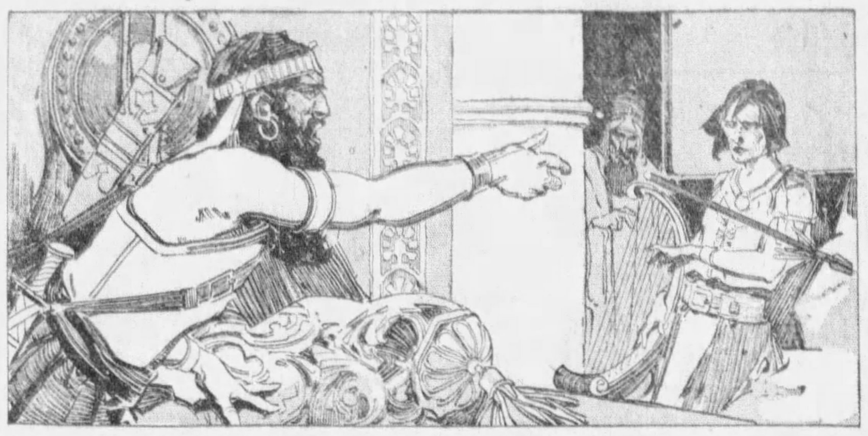
The Story of David -:- CHAPTER VII -:- Told in Pictures by Dan Smith



King Saul had become very wroth because the people said "Saul has slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands," and he said, "What more can he have but the kingdom? And he eyed David from that day forward. And one day while David played before Saul on a harp, an evil spirit was upon Saul and he cast his javelin at David, saying, "I will smite David even to the wall with it." But twice David escaped him.

Then Saul plotted in his heart, and offered David his daughter Merab for his wife if David would fight the Lord's battles. For he wanted David to be slain not by his hand, but by the Philistines.

But Merab was not given to David but to Adriel, as his wife. And Saul's daughter Michal loved David; and they told this to Saul, and it pleased him. For he said, "I will give him her, that she may be a snare to him." (Continued next week)

Irving Berlin Coming to Radio

By AIRCASTER

Irving Berlin, until the moment, has been a shrinking violet so far as commercial radio is concerned.

He has been content to sit by idly, while his music served as his only contact with the michrophones; music that has sacrificed much of its longevity to constant repetition.

But the sponsor seems to have got around to him at last, and to have convinced him that there is more money to be made in a brief series of broadcasting than by months of slavery at the pianoforte, composing tunes for the nation to sing.

* * *

LOCAL SPONSOR

Irving, one discovers, comes to the radio for the Pittsburgh oil magnates who are now paying off George M. Cohan, and at intervals, Will Rogers.

The writer of popular songs and hit tunes for the shows will make his debut after Will Rogers has completed an eight-week cycle which begins in January.

Thereafter, Irving and Cohan will alternate as guests on Sunday nights.

Berlin will play and, I am told, will likewise sing, and tell about how a composer goes about makings songs that inspire you to whistle and chant in the bathtub.

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

C. A. R. and others have written for information regarding the American Weekly contest. They want to know the winning title. I can't tell them because I don't know. All that I know is that a staff of checkers and judges is working desperately hard to finish an enormous task. As soon as the winning title has been chosen you will hear about it. There won't be a chance of your missing it. I promise that.

* * *

Mrs. Laura Windstein, North Side, wants other globe trotters to examine the credentials of a man purporting to represent well advertised household products and giving a set of dishes away as a premium. She paid a deposit and received no goods. She inquired at the Pittsburgh office of the company supposed to be represented by the man and they told her they had no such representative.

It isn't fair to be suspicious of all door-to-door salesmen, as most of them are honest, hard-working people, representing reliable houses with reliable merchandise. Just make sure before you hand an money over, that's all.

Dangers of unemployment are readily seen in the case of James Sella. He spent his spare time figuring out a beer problem. From his voluminous tables you can tell the specific gravity of the alcohol in a 12-ounce bottle of 3.2. My head goes around trying to follow the figures. It must be stronger than 3.2.

Mary Pickford's Life Story :: By Marjorie Driscoll

Doug's Gaiety Attracts Mary; Friendship Ripens on Liberty Loan Tour

Herewith the Sun-Telegraph presents the dramatic life story of Mary Pickford, the end of whose romance with Douglas Fairbanks has come with the filing of her divorce suit. Earlier chapters told of her childhood, her stage and film career, her marriage to Owen Moore, and her divorce from him.

CHAPTER SIX

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 16.—Three of filmland's outstanding personalities left Hollywood in 1918 to tour the country and sell Liberty Bonds,

Mary Pickford, Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks.

Fairbanks had started life in Denver as Douglas Ullman. He changed his name when his mother married a second time, and young Douglas took his stepfather's name.

He had won considerable success on the stage, and in Hollywood rapidly established himself as a star of the swashbuckling athletic type.

It was Fairbanks' incorrigible gaiety and fondness for lively pranks that first appealed to Mary. There had never been a great deal of fun in her life. She had always been too busy to play. Her first husband, Owen Moore, was a quiet sort of chap.

She told friends that Douglas Fairbanks was "the most amusing person she had ever met."

Fairbanks, at the time of the Liberty Loan tour, was still married to Beth Sully, daughter of Daniel Sully, the cotton king, but their separation was imminent. In March, 1919, Mrs. Fairbanks obtained a divorce.

ROMANCE SCENTED

Weeks of traveling about the country with the Liberty Loan party ripened the friendship between Mary and Douglas. As time went on, Hollywood began to speculate on the possibility of a romance.

Fairbanks outspokenly admired Mary. He engaged a leading woman for one of his pictures, and told friends, as a high compliment to her, that she reminded him of Mary.

Periodically, Hollywood renewed the gossip, but nothing happened.

And then, on March 31, 1920, the world learned that Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks had been married for two days.

R. S. (Cupid) Sparks, then the marriage license clerk for Los Angeles County, was in the plot. He was called to the Fairbanks home one night and told to bring the necessary documents. There he issued a marriage license to Gladys Mary Moore, 26, and Douglas Elton Fairbanks, 36. He took it back to his office and locked it up in the deepest recesses of his safe.

THE WEDDING

At 10:30 o'clock on the night of March 28, 1920, a little group gathered at the home of Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher, Baptist minister.

There were Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, Robert Fairbanks, brother of Douglas, and Robert's wife; Marjorie Daw, film actress; Benny Zeidman and Carlyle Robinson.

And there were Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks.

Mary wore a gown of white silk tulle over white satin, with touches of apple green and a green spray at her waist. Bowing to the old tradition, one of her white silk stockings was inside out—an omen of happiness that proved faithless.

Douglas was in evening clothes. Both of them were nervous.

It was a simple but dignified ceremony, as Dr. Brougher described it afterwards. The double ring ceremony was used, and the attendants were Marjorie Daw and Robert Fairbanks.

HOLLYWOOD LEARNS NEWS

And for two whole days, Hollywood went about its business, never guessing that Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks were married.

The news was told at a wedding dinner given on March 30 with the same group of guests and two or three others.

"I never was so happy before—I never expect to be so happy again," said Mary.

"I've got the prettiest, most wonderful wife who ever existed," said Douglas.

Somebody used the phrase that had been applied to Miss Pickford—"America's sweetheart."

MARY AND DOUG PICTURED SHORTLY AFTER MARRIAGE

With burlesque fury, Doug protested:

"This 'America's sweetheart' business must stop. She's my sweetheart. And if the world doesn't like it, they know the way to Beverly Hills."

"It's a wonderful tribute," protested Mary.

"I know it, but hereafter this loving business has got to be just screen stuff," announced Doug.

MARY WINS DELAY

It was revealed that, while the marriage license had been issued on Friday, and Fairbanks wanted to be married "right then," Mary had insisted on waiting. There was no three-day marriage law in California then, but she had her way.

She didn't want to be married on Friday, she did want to be married on Sunday, and she wanted to be married in a white bridal gown instead of the black dress she was wearing when the license was issued.

In the midst of the wedding dinner, Lottie, Mary's sister, telephoned. She had just heard the rumor of the ceremony. Coming back from the telephone, Mary reported:

"She's crying because she wasn't there, but she's forgiven us."

Jack Pickford, also kept in the dark, did not learn of his sister's marriage until the newspapers told him.

Mary herself remembered, during the excitement of the dinner, to notify Charlie Chaplin, close friend of both. She laughed:

"He'll kill us for not telling sooner."

Fairbanks distributed among the men at the table seven-inch Havana cigars, each enclosed in a souvenir box. Somebody suggested that the boxes be autographed. Mary signed one, and then suddenly burst into delighted laughter, saying:

"It's the first time I ever signed my name as Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks."

Congratulations poured in upon Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks when the news became known. Hollywood purred happily over the story, boasted that here at last was the perfect film romance.

Nobody could look ahead for 13 years.

(Monday's installment will tell of the early years of the marriage of Mary and Doug, the building of Pickfair, and how Mary helped her husband with his career.)

Wed in Secret; News Shocks Hollywood

SPECIAL RECIPES REQUESTED

Suggestions seem to be the order of the day in letters received this week. Suggestions on new and different recipes, as well as requests for special dishes.

Florence Welsh, of 1314 Highman street, is anxious for a Christmas recipe for springles, while Mrs. William J. Brown wants to know how to make really delicious crumpets, which she terms "a soft, not too sweet, fruited drop biscuit." From Crafton, Mrs Clara Bracey writes:

"Would you please send out a request for a recipe of a good German rye bread? I would appreciate it very much."

Brown, old-fashioned peppermints, are what Miss A. Briggs, of Ingram, wants to know how to make. Mrs. Lizzie Weaver, of Windber, on the other hand, is anxious for some lemon butter for the holidays.

If you have any of these recipes, send them in to Prudence Penny with your other favorites, and in return you may be awarded the $5 prize or one of the ten $1 prizes awarded daily.

Below is a recipe for uncooked salad dressing, which won Mrs. Stephen P. Faull, of 3355 Francisco street, a $1 prize several weeks ago. In its original publication, some of the ingredients were omitted. It follows:

UNCOOKED SALAD DRESSING

Two eggs.
One teaspoon salt.
One and one-fourth teaspoons mustard, dry.
One cup vinegar.
One can Eagle brand condensed milk.
Beat eggs until light and lemon colored. Add milk slowly, beating all the time you are adding milk (use Dover or electric beater); dissolve salt and mustard in vinegar and add to egg and milk, continue to beat for several minutes. Place in jar. Do not cook. Can be used as needed.

Five-Dollar Prize Winner

MRS. LYDA WEAVER,
88 Lincoln avenue, North Irwin.
OATMEAL BREAD

Boil for five minutes one small box Quick oats, 10c size, in one gallon water, two tablespoons salt; cool.
5c baker's yeast.
One cup molasses.
Two cups brown sugar.
Small piece orange peel, cut in small pieces, or peel from one orange, dried, cut in small pieces.
One tablespoon caraway seed.
Knead with white flour until real stiff. Let raise about three hours. Pan in loaves as other bread. Raise, bake in slow oven, about one and one-half hours.

Ten $1 Prize Winners

MRS. FRANCES REYNOLDS,
410 East Washington avenue, Connellsville.
STUFFED FRESH HAM

Have your butcher cut a thick slice from a fresh ham, about two or two and one-half inches thick; if your family is large, you may have him cut your piece thicker. Then ask him to cut a pocket in it, be sure he cuts all the way back round the bone. Fill this with your favorite stuffing. After it is filled, close opening and rub meat with salt, then with melted butter, and dredge with flour to which a pinch of dry mustard has been added; place in roaster and brown in hot oven, then reduce heat, add water, cover and bake at least one and one-half hours.

STUFFING

One small loaf of white bread, dried and crumbed.
Pinch of thyme.
One-half cup raisins.
One teaspoon chopped onion.
Three teaspoons melted butter.
Enough warm milk to moisten.
One-fourth teaspoon salt.
One-eighth teaspoon pepper.

MRS. A. T. COCHRAN,
15 Chartiers place, Ingram
BREAD-CRUMB CAKE

One cup sugar.
Two cups crumbs, from very dry left-over bread.
Three eggs.
One teaspoon vanilla.
One-quarter teaspoon salt.
One-quarter teaspoon almond extract.
One-quarter teaspoon cinnamon.
Beat the eggs well, add the sugar and stir in the other ingredients. Put the mixture evenly in a shallow greased pan. Bake in a slow oven from 30 to 40 minutes. This has somewhat the texture and flavor of macaroons and is a good way to use up stale bread.

MISS MARGARET TRUE,
R. F. D. No. 1, Beaver.
RAW CAULIFLOWER SALAD

Wash and cut cauliflower. Place on bed of lettuce. Pour over the cauliflower a small portion of French dressing. This is a very delicious and wholesome salad. Be sure to cut the cauliflower into edible pieces.

MISS ANGELINE SERRA,
123 Lowry avenue, Jeannette.
SWEET MUSH

Five tablespoons farina.
Four tablespoons sugar.
One-half quart milk.
Flavor with grated lemon rind.
Cook until thick, put in a greased cake pan, let it set until cool. Slice and dip in egg and cracker meal and fry in oil.

MRS. C. L. LIVINGSTON,
423 Large avenue, Clairton.
CLUSTER COOKIES

Cut tiny circles from rolled cooky dough with floured thimble (or use circles left from cutting cooky rings and wreaths). Arrange in clusters of three or more, pressing overlapped edges together lightly. Brush with egg mixture for glazing. Decorate with raisins and chopped nuts, or regular sugar, place a pecan meat in center or cluster of three silver dragies on each and a red candy in center of cluster, or decorate a cluster of five with design of red caraway seeds and sprinkle with colored sugar. Bake.

MRS. GEORGE SLOFF,
Sykesville.
"BALLOONS."

One cup water.
One tablespoon Crisco.
One cup pastry flour.
One-half teaspoon salt.
Three eggs unbeaten.
Bring Crisco and water to a boil in a saucepan. Take from fire, add flour and salt. Return to fire, beat until it forms paste which leaves sides of pan. When partly cool, add eggs one at a time, beating each one in thoroughly. Drop tablespoon of batter in moderately hot Crisco 350 to 360 degrees Farherheit, or when cube of bread browns in 60 seconds. Fry slowly until puffed and brown. In frying balloons be sure and leave room enough in the kettle for them to puff, as they get large and hollow inside as they are frying. When one side browns they will turn over themselves. Test with toothpick, drain on soft paper, cool, make slit in one side, fill with jam mixed with whipped cream or crushed strawberries with whipped cream or cream filling or any other favorite fruit. Dust with powered sugar. These balloons are similar to cream puffs only they are round and quicker to prepare.

MRS. MAE WEST CHATTAWAY,
Hazzard.
A GOOD DRESSING FOR CABBAGE

Four tablespoons sugar.
Four tablespoons vinegar.
Eight tablespoons milk.
Little salt.
Little mustard.
Mix sugar, salt and mustard together, add vinegar then add the milk slowly, mix well. Do not cook.

MRS. L. M. HOLMES,
2409 Osgood street.
SWEET POTATO BALLS

Six cups riced sweet potatoes.
Three tablespoons milk.
One and one-fourth teaspoons salt.
One-eighth teaspoon pepper.
One teaspoon minced onion.
Three tablespoons melted butter.
Three egg yolks.
Add the milk, salt, minced onion (this may be omitted if desired), melted fat, and beaten egg yolks to the riced sweet potatoes. Shape into balls about one and one-half inches in diameter, using one heaping tablespoon for each. Then roll the balls in finely sifted, dried bread crumbs; next in beaten egg (use one egg and two tablespoons water beaten together), and then in crumbs again. Fry in deep fat at 390 degrees F. until golden brown and done. Makes 15 balls.

MRS. TILDA SOLOMAN,
2950 Webster avenue.
AUSTRIAN KRAUT PLETZL.

Two cups sifted flour, two eggs and a little water, enough to make a noodle dough. Roll a thin noodle sheet on a floured board, and cut in one-inch squares. Drop into boiling salt water and cook for 10 minutes. Drain, cover well with butter. Grate one cupful raw cabbage, sprinkle with salt and let it stand for 10 minutes. In a skillet, melt two tablespoons butter and pour in the cabbage. Mix well. When browned pour this mixture in the dough, mix several times. Heat in oven and serve hot.

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

The Junior League is just weighted down with distinction—first its art and interests committee puts on an exhibit that's a "scoop," 30 some original drawings of old masters in the club rooms in the Clark Building (it's open to the public until January 6) and last night it sponsored a production of rare beauty—the reproduction of the Giotto frescoes.

Before the frescoes were reproduced last night at the Twentieth Century Club in glorified tableau manner, Fred Molinari playing bagpipes (the bagpipe is an early Italian instrument we've been informed!) led a colorful procession through the audience, of Italian folk in peasant costumes.

Girls in Uniforms Distribute Programs

Last night's production was a benefit for Mrs. Charles S. Shoemaker's Frontier Nursing Service. And at the main entrance to the "theater" Rebecca and Virginia Doyle, in the uniform of the frontier nurses—smart blue-gray riding habits with boots to the knee—distributed programs.

The audience was a brilliant gathering of smartly gowned women—there weren't so many men.

Black sequins on the rippled reveres, cut wide on top of the shoulder to form little capes, distinguished the bodice of Mrs. George L. Craig, Jr.'s black crepe dress, cut with v-decolletage.

Louise Reed was in a charming sapphire blue dinner gown having long sleeves, slit from the shoulder to the tight-fitting wrist. Filmy, narrow black tulle on the bodice and the hem-line of the molded skirt distinguished Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby's black crepe gown.

Elizabeth Macfarlane, who was one of the group selling tickets, wore a subtle gown of coral velvet, draped and tucked at the high, wide neckline. Her mother, Mrs. James R. Macfarlane, was selling tickets, too.

Russian-Looking Costume of Velvet

Mrs. H. H. McClintic wore a black velvet gown having a train, Mrs. Blair Childs chose a Russian-looking costume—a bright, dark blue evening skirt and an orange-red uncut velvet short tunic blouse, and Genevieve Bell chose a copper green dress with silver for accent.

And I had a glimpse of Mrs. Raymond Hilliard, of Mary Louise Succop, Catherine Suydam, Mrs. Jacob S. Payton, Mrs. Gordon Fisher, Jr., the James O. Flowers, Mrs. Norman McLeod, Mrs Dorwin Donnelly, Mrs. T. Howe Nimick, the Williams Maclay Halls.

An interesting cascade of red velvet ruffles, with the bottom ruffles much wider than the top ruffles, inserted on the back of Mrs. Donald Bakewell's red velvet gown, suggested the bustle of bygone days.

Gown of Black With Gold Lame Bodice

Mrs. William Christopher Robinson wore a black velvet gown with a bodice of gold lame; Mrs. William Standish III was there, and so were Mrs Dorwin Donnelly, Mrs. Roberdeau Green Annan, Mrs. W. L. Jones, Jr., Helen Leovy, the Edwin Rheas and Jane Sloan. I also saw Mrs. T. J. Hilliard, Mrs Herbert DuPuy, Mrs. John H. Ricketson, Jr., Mrs. Thomas L. Orr, Mrs. James Verner Scaife, Mrs. George Singer Ebbert, Dorothy Jarvis, Mrs. Samuel Harden Church, Mary Philput and her mother, Mrs. Anna F. Philput, Mrs Gilbert Rafferty, Mrs. W. McCook Reed, Betty Kennedy and Katherine MacCloskey.

Sherley Tunnell is today's debutante. She is bowing at an informal tea in the home of her parents, the E. P. Tunnells, which is being given by her sister, post-deb Helen.

The bud is wearing red crepe made with a very long skirt and high neckline, and brief sleeves banded with a narrow braid of the same material. Helen is wearing beige crepe

Debutante Honored At Dinner Dance

Christmas green and red decked the small tables and the home, too, of the Frederic Schaefers last night for the cabaret dinner-dance they gave honoring debutante Evelyn Freeman, daughter of the John M. Freemans.

The guest of honor wore white satin with silver spangles to give a Yuletide tone, and the hostess chose green satin.

The Schaefers' daughter Jane will be home, by the way, from the Ethel Walker School Thursday, and their son Frederic Schaefer, Jr., from Milton Academy, Milton, Mass.

Mrs. J. W. Oliver, of Sewickley Heights, and her daughter, Martha Jane, will entertain at a school-set party in their home the evening of December 23—it's to be a dance for 80 guests.

Before the Oliver dance, Mrs. John N. Critchlow, of Sewickley, will give a dinner in her home honoring her son, John N. Critchlow, Jr.

Before the dance the A. B. Craigs will give December 26 in the Edgeworth Club, the James Barr Jaineses, of Sewickley, will be hosts at a dinner in the Community Kitchen honoring their daughter, Clara.

Bridal Party Chosen For Crawford Wedding

Friends of the George Gordon Crawfords of the Schenley Apartments, East End, and of Birmingham, Ala., are all agog about plans for their daughter Peggy's wedding, although it will take place in Birmingham and not in Pittsburgh.

Peggy will marry J. Kirkman Jackson, of Birmingham, Wednesday, December 20, at 4 o'clock in the Birmingham Church of the Advent with the Rev. Dr. Charles Clingman officiating.

Peggys' attendants will be Mrs. Susan Freeman, (Helen Jackson) of New York; Mrs. David Guy, of Philadelphia; Myra Locker, of New Orleans; Dora Comer, of Alexander City, Ala., and Sarah Nesbitt, of Birmingham.

In the wedding party will be Burrows Freeman, of New York; Dr. William A Gunter, of Montgomery; Willis Hagan, George W. Connors, Jr., Barney Ireland, Walter Brower, Allen Johnson, John B. Levert, Arthur C. Crowder, Jr., George Stubbs and Lovell Yerkes, all of Birmingham.

GETTING AWAY FROM THE SIMPLE

Three orchids of the sort that show yellow throats in a puff of pale lavender are pinned on this velvet frock.

Only the jewel colors match in the hair bandeau and the two bracelets. Each makes a play of mock emeralds with rhinestones.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

JUST HOW ornate can a girl's costume be, and yet fall within the bounds of good taste, in these days when Diamond Lil pokes a finger in Dame Fashion's wheel?

The answer, Mesdames, is largely a matter of how well groomed you are. If you have a lovely make-up, a coiffure that could sit for a creditable portrait, a manicure that looks like a beauty parlor triumph, and a simple gown that can take on lots of extraneous, decorative tidbits you can go the limit of flowers, jewels at hand and head, not to mention your ears, and maybe a beaded bag and a chiffon handkerchief besides!

This is the first time in years that it has not been in really questionable taste to go lush in one's costuming, so it is no wonder that conservative women look askance at the break. But with very good looking velvet gowns selling around the 25-dollar mark, orchids at bargain prices, rhinestone manacles for the same and beauty parlors well meant toward the budgeteer, miracles can be worked with a conscience.

Congress in Bright Garb Setting for Party of Outlook Alliance

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The beautifully decorated silver and blue auditorium of the Congress of Clubs made a fitting background for the Outlook Alliance's luncheon yesterday. The entire house looks charming in its gay dress of holiday greens and silver and wreaths.

The table decorations for the Alliance luncheon were in blue and silver, too, matching the silver leaves to be seen in great sprays against blue star-studded wrappings on the pillars. Even the tree is lighted entirely in blue and its only other decoration is silver "rain."

Just before the luncheon Mrs. G. W. Grier directed assembly caroling led by Mrs. Joseph Blume, Mrs. Elizabeth Kirkpatrick and Miss Marie Sybert. Children from the Curtis Home came in for the program which included solos on the vibraphone by George H. Flint and a playlet by Alliance members.

This last was an amusing little work, showing "Christmas in the Old Ladies' Home," the inmates grudgingly accepting their dark colored practical gifts from "the adult Bible class," while colorful, pretty things from "the young people's Bible class" transformed the spirit of the whole occasion.

In the cast were Mrs. H. Kloman Schmidt, Mrs. Martin Leiseder, Mrs. A. J. Jaegle, Mrs. A. L. Criswell, Mrs. Willard Alter, Mrs. J. E. Crawshaw, Mrs. F. D. Iffert, Mrs. Perin Peoples, Mrs. Marion Foster Smith and Mrs. A. E. Kind.

A bag of gifts was distributed by Santa to the little Curtis Home guests.

Quiet Girls as Well Liked As 'Snappy Numbers'

Is "Lovey" due to lose the boy friend because she's just a quiet little wren, without whoopee or wisecracks?

Or is something else cramping her style?

Dear Elsie:

Will you please advise me about a very important problem? I am 17, and a senior at high. I have quite a few friends and get along well with all of them.

There is just one big thing that seems to handicap me—I am very backward when I am with a crowd. The young folks I go with are very peppy, and I do join in their fun, but I just can't be as noisy as the rest of them. How shall I overcome this fault?

The reason I am so concerned is that for the past eight months I have been going around with a boy I think is the best person on earth. Although he has asked me to go steady, and I want to more than anything else, I have refused. You probably can't understand why I did this.

But you see my reason is that before he started going with me he broke up with a girl he had been going with for three years. She is so different from me! She is very peppy, and a girl who is always ready for anything.

When he first went around with me he never even talked of her. He always told me how refined I was, and although that made me feel grand I always thought, "Oh, if I only could be a little peppy, and sometimes even loud."

SEES OTHER GIRL

Now he has been going over to see this old girl friend and I feel terrible. I am willing to do anything to win him back.

Can you help me? Is it my quietness that is hindering me, or is it that he still prefers her? Every time there is any school entertainment I am the one he picks to take.

I guess I should feel that he is proud to be seen with me (as he always tells me he is), but if it is my quietness that is driving him back to her I must do something quick.

I met his mother the other night, and he acted very proud to introduce me to her, but I felt so shy. There must surely be a way out for me. What is it? I am not a poor sport. I am not entirely quiet, either. It is just that I can't be as forward as I would like to be.

Boys think that all girls should be very peppy and forward, and, although I am a little peppy, as most girls at 17 are, I am not forward enough. Please help me. I must keep him from going back to her. What can I do? LOVEY.

What can you do, little sister? Be yourself, and quit trying to be a carbon copy of the other girls you know! But boys "like 'em snappy"? That's just your notion, youngster—but you're so sold on it that you won't believe the truth when you see it. What more could any boy do to prove to you that he doesn't care for Loud Lizzies? He has shown you every preference.

CRAMPING OWN STYLE

"But he's still seeing her!" you wail. Well, what of it? No boy of his age, if he is sensible, is going to see just one girl, and no one else. Especially if the one girl he wants to see keeps shoving him off. And that's what you've been doing, honey.

You're so scared of yourself, and your own notion of "what boys like," that you're cramping your own style. It's not your lack of pep that's queering you; it's your own foolish fears and suspicions.

So stop worrying. Stop trying to be something you're not. Noisy people may make a big splash—but quiet people have something mighty valuable to give, too. They have sympathy and restfulness and gentleness to give. And those are things that all the world is seeking.

So stop working up "Big Bad Wolfs" for yourself, and be your own fun-loving, friendly self. You, in yourself, have all the makings of popularity, if you'll just be true to that self.

BY THE CITY LIGHTS

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Have you ever caught up with Beauty—just to find that it was not Beauty at all? Have you ever pursued a graceful figure down a gray stone block, snared by the polished gold hair that showed from the back of the choicest chapeau, the slimmest of ankles, intrigued by the size of a foot and the smallness of a waist and the beauty of the furs around and about the girl? Have you ever overtaken her to find a hard cold face with lines, a nose too long for admiration, an answer that didn't go with the promise of the hair and the feet and the furs at all?

Many times the disappointed artist does that thing. Only to find the mean step-sister looking over a shoulder, where one looked to find Cinderella.

The feminine faces we pass. "Some of them," filliped wise William, "look faminenine if you ask me. Famished for a bit of heart and other thoughts beside those of clothes. THESE are the ones I would call the true clothes-horses. They dream clothes, while they walk in their sleep. They are perfectly turned out at every minute of the day, with nothing on their minds but the last thing in hats. . . ."

It is true that thousands of the prettiest, really most beautiful faces you peer into, have a setting of the poorest clothes. And many of those with everything in the way of background and dressing-up to ravish the heart of a lady, have the indifferently attractive face.

The loveliest face I ever saw in my years of chasing faces was that of a Polish girl with a big baby on her arm, watching with a pair of glamorous eyes for her laborer husband to swing off a train. Nothing on her head. A calico dress. But with the face of an angel.

Ah, the faces that pass!

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Preparing for Showers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—A friend of mine is giving a shower for a friend of hers whom I have never met. I have been invited and I would like some information concerning an appropriate gift and what to wear.

2—What is the usual entertainment at an affair of this sort? It is to be given in the evening.

3—Do I take the gift with me, and to whom do I present it? K.

1—Usually, on the invitation, there is some indication of what kind of gift is expected...that is, whether the shower is to be a linen shower, a kitchen shower, a glass shower, or even the indefinite "miscellaneous shower." Was there nothing like that to guide you in the gift that you are supposed to bring? If there isn't, then by all means inquire of your friend as to her suggestion . . . she may know and may have forgotten to tell you about the type of gift. An informal dress, a dress of the "dinner-dress" type, would undoubtedly be the appropriate dress to wear.

2—Usually showers are not held in the evening, but when they are, usually there is bridge, or something of this kind, and later, supper, usually now a buffet supper.

3—Yes, you take the gift with you to the shower. As you arrive, give the gift to your hostess, who will have plans as to how the gifts will be placed and presented to the guest of honor.

Anniversary Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been corresponding with one of my boy friend's sisters for quite a while, but just had the pleasure of meeting her and her husband while they were on a visit here.

They are going to celebrate their tenth wedding anniversary in a few weeks, and they have asked us to visit them for a few days. Is it proper to get them some sort of a gift? If so, what could it be? My friend and I usually chip together when remembering someone in our family . . . would it be proper to do so now? B.

Yes, do take a gift when you go for this visit. That is an especially gracious invitation that they have given you, for an especially important occasion, and you should make a gesture that will do honor to that occasion as well as to their hospitality.

And I would like to have you give your gift separately. Your gift should show taste, should not be too personal, and should be, if possible, of some kind that would be useful even if they already had something of the same kind or similar. For instance, a handsome photograph frame is always a welcome gift. So is a leather portfolio for a desk or table. Or a pair of crystal vases, or a single one. Or a cigaret box and matching ash tray and perhaps match box. A small clock (with really good works) is also a good gift: it might be of the traveling clock variety. A serving tray of some kind . . . silver, sterling or plate, or a lovely painted tray.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Triple Play

Mrs. Elliott H. Evans, of Evanston, Ill., in 1929 won, with Mrs. Sidney Lovell, of the same city, the Contract Pair Championship of the American Bridge League. One of the reasons why she was able to accomplish this result is evident from the manner in which she played the hand below, which required a strip play in which one opponent was voided of cards in the spade suit, followed by a forced lead and then by a squeeze. Usually a hand which offers any one of these elements lingers in the memory of the player fortunate enough to fulfill a difficult contract. Hence the combination of the three is remarkable.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ K 7 6 5 ♡ K 7 2 ◇ J 8 ♣ A K Q 2
♠ 10 9 8 4 ♡ Q J 10 8 5 4 ◇ 4 ♣ 7 6	North West East South	♠ J 2 ♡ 6 ◇ K 10 9 7 5 2 ♣ J 10 9 8
	♠ A Q 3 ♡ A 9 3 ◇ A Q 6 3 ♣ 5 4 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇ (1)	Pass	3 ♣ (2)	Pass
4 N T (3)	Pass	6 N T (4)	Double (5)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1.—The hand is not strong enough for a vulnerable Opening one-notrump bid.

2—North's hand is not strong enough for a Forcing Takeout. It contains barely 3 honor-tricks and does not have a fit with partner's suit.

3—In view of partner's Forcing Takeout, the four-notrump bid, showing three Aces, is probably not over-ambitious, although the hand does not contain any particular body.

4—This is again an overbid by North. The Forcing Takeout was not justified and the Raise to a Slam is extremely dangerous.

5—East's Double is based upon the fact that he holds stoppers in the suits bid by both North and South.

West's Opening lead was the Queen of hearts, and the King won in Dummy. The next two tricks were taken with the Ace and Queen of spades, and then three club tricks were taken. Mrs. Evans from Dummy then led the deuce of clubs, forcing East into the lead. The fall of the Knave of spades had indicated that East could hold no more cards of that suit. As a matter of fact, East's hand was also void of hearts, so there remained but one suit to lead and the diamond return was won with the Knave in Dummy. The ninth and tenth tricks were taken with the Queen and Ace in the Declarer's hand, and West was squeezed, as he could not retain two spades and two hearts to protect both suits, so Mrs. Evans won the balance of the tricks.

The most interesting feature of the hand is that Mrs. Evans realized that her only chance of success lay in East having one heart only. At the eighth trick, had East had a heart return, the Slam contract of course must have been defeated. South could not take the Ace of hearts in order to strip East of hearts in the event that he held two, as then East, after winning the club trick, could have played the King of diamonds instead of a small diamond, and South would not have had an entry to her own hand to make the three diamond tricks which were essential in order to effect the squeeze on West.

Madge Wonders What to Expect From Avis

My fingers tightened involuntarily upon the telephone as Avis Arlen's voice gaily caroling "Surprise! Surprise!" came over the wires. But, indeed, it was no surprise. I realized now that I had expected something of the sort, ever since Helena Brixton's recital of the determined effort of the girl to get hold of the bridesmaid's gown, which I was sure she was determined not to wear at Mary's wedding.

There was no limit to the effrontery of Avis Arlen. I had found that out most unpleasantly in past clashes with her, and, instantly on guard, I waited to answer her until I had looked at my wrist watch and made a mental computation of railway time tables.

With a gay challenge, she had said that I "never could guess where she was," but I knew only too well, and I answered her with as much semblance of courteous friendliness as I could muster.

"You must be at Patchogue, aren't you?" I asked.

"Oh! How perfectly clever!" she gurgled. "How did you ever guess it?"

"That's my secret," I told her, trying to keep my voice keyed to airy casualness. "Is your mother with you?"

There was a pause. I guessed that she had not been prepared for that particular question, and with her usual cautious cunning was waiting to consider it from all angles before she answered it.

MOTHER PEEVED

"No, she isn't," she said at last, "and I am as nearly angry at her as I ever could be at my darling Mummy. You see, Uncle Phil asked us to come down early tomorrow morning with him in the big car, and Mummy thought I ought to wait and come with them. She said you had so many people staying with you it was an imposition for me to come out and take a bed. But I told her you could hang me up on a nail anywhere, just for tonight; and when I found I didn't have to wait for my bridesmaid's gown, I thought it would be better for me to come on out so that I could have a chance to rehearse at least once with the others.

"Mummy was quite peeved with me," she went on, hardly stopping for breath, "but I told her I knew that you would want me to come out tonight. I was right, wasn't I, dear Mrs. Graham?"

I took refuge in subterfuge, determined not to stultify myself by answering her question with a "yes," and unwilling to give even her brazen persistence the discourtesy of a "No."

"I'm afraid there's something the matter with the telephone," I said. "Please come closer and speak very distinctly. Are you in the railroad station at Patchogue?"

"Yes."

"Then stay right there. Don't leave it for anything. Someone will be there for you in a little over an hour."

"Oh! Lovely fun!" she gurgled. Then her voice took on a coaxing tone.

ASKS FOR NOEL

"Dear Mrs. Graham," she cooed. "Would it be possible for Noel to come after me? It would be only two or three hours out of the whole lifetime—Mary will have all the rest—and it will remain so much to me! And I think, to Noel. You see, as I told you before when I asked to have Noel meet me, there is something very special, very precious, between Noel and me which never can be explained to anyone else."

The words which trembled on my tongue would have sizzled the wires. But I had a more effective weapon—the one I had just used.

"This phone is simply atrocious," I said, with apparent impatience. "But I must be sure that you understand me. Please answer only by 'yes' or 'no.' Do you understand that you are to wait at the station until we come for you?"

I had spoken very slowly, with pauses between the words, but her answer was prompt. "Yes, yes; but can't No-el—"

"Then goodby," I said sharply, and hung up the telephone with a decision that brought a giggle from Marion, who had loitered near me while I was telephoning.

"I don't know what she wanted, but you certainly settled her," she said with glee. "But don't tell me that pain-in-the-neck is coming out here tonight!"

"I'm afraid she is," I answered, not even lifting my eyebrows at her crass characterization of Avis Arlen. "And I want to call on you and Ronald and Carolyn and Bob for some very special help when she gets here."

"Yours to command," she told me, hugging me impetuously. "This is perfectly thrilling, you know. Shall I get them together now, so you can tell us what you want of us?"

These motifs are just the thing to select for some of those last minute gifts because they are made of very big crosses—four to the inch—so it is easy to see how fast the work can be done! The peasant pair are delightful on a simple laundry bag practically made of two straight pieces, while the floral motif makes a lovely splash of color on that so popular knitting bag. The two peasants would make a lovely pillow, too. The embroidery is to be done either in wool or in rope silk on a coarse material.

Pattern 590 comes to you with the motifs of the peasant figures 15½x16½ inches and the floral motif 7½x15½ inches, complete directions for making the two bags shown and a pillow, yardages and color suggestions.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Exposure Is a Cause of Myositis

A disease given the name "myositis" sounds like something dreadful. In reality it is no more than a simple inflammation of a muscle. At times it may be extremely painful, but as a rule it runs its course speedily and soon disappears.

Dr. Copeland

The inflammation can be traced to exposure to cold, wet or dampness. It may also be the result of a blow, overexertion and strain, or certain infectious diseases. In rare instances it may be caused by lead, mercury or alcohol poisoning.

The disease is especially common among persons who are susceptible to gouty and rheumatic afflictions. Since the pain is in a muscle, it is often incorrectly called "muscular rheumatism," "neuralgia" or "rheumatics."

Myositis may involve any muscle of the body. The pain usually appears during the night or early morning. This is a characteristic sign of this disorder. As a rule, the patient is awakened with great pain and believes he will be unable to get up for work. This story alone is often sufficient to make the diagnosis of myositis.

The sufferer first complains of a dull and aching pain in the afflicted muscle. The attack comes on suddenly, becomes more and more severe and may be almost unbearable. In advanced cases the victim is unable to walk and is confined to bed for several days. Fortunately, most cases are of a mild nature and subside within a few days.

When myositis is severe and prolonged, relief is obtained by gentle massage of the afflicted muscle. The massage should be given twice a day. Though this may cause a certain amount of pain at first, it will bring relief. A good plan is to rub the part with iodine liniment and then apply hot compresses.

Another valuable home remedy is to iron the skin above the painful muscles with a very warm iron. Care must be taken to avoid burning the surface. Place a thick piece of flannel over the inflamed muscle, using this as a protective pad.

In all cases, rest is imperative. Avoid walking and any exertion while pain is still present. Complete rest in bed until the pain entirely disappears will insure complete recovery and help to prevent recurrences.

If you are subject to attacks of myositis make sure you are not harboring some point of infection, such as diseased teeth, tonsils and sinuses. A careful physical examination is advised for the correction of all underlying disorders.

Children Are Imitators

By LISA GRENELLE

The considerate child is not born, but made.

"That Jones girl is pretty, but so disrespectful!" How often have you heard that or some similar phrase? Does it mean that the Jones child has never been taught manners?

Possibly. But probably not. Probably the Jones girl has been taught superficial manners. Probably she knows by heart all the rigmarole of etiquette—when to smile, bow and use trite polite phrases. But she has never been given any reasons for them, and she asks for none. When taken out, she does her tricks like a trained poodle, repeats her phrases like a trained parrot—and then what? Then she feels that nothing more can be expected of her, and proceeds to act like a little savage.

And that Jones girl undoubtedly would meet with bored indifference and unbelief any assertion that her carefully taught behaviorism has no meaning in itself unless it is the outward demonstration of that real consideration for others and self-control without which civilization in any advanced form could not persist.

Too many big words there for a small girl, perhaps—but not too big an idea to be instilled into every child from the age of three.

Children are great imitators, all of them. They imitate their parents—until they find them unworthy of imitation—not only in deed and manner but in attitude. Respect your child and he will respect you.

Sounds strange—to respect a child—does it? But no adult needs it so much or is so worthy of it. A child needs respect, for it is impressionable raw material, and although it will not long be helpless physically, it will be a long time in need of help mentally and emotionally. And it is worthy of respect because it is instinctively so honest, so genuine, so ready to learn, so appreciative.

And as for privacy—you have a right to yours, in hours when you wish to be alone; so have your children. Ask them to leave the room, by all means, when you wish privacy, but as politely as you would an adult. Don't order them out as if in punishment, but give them a reason. "I'm tired," or "I'm busy; see you later," as you would to a friend. And in turn, when your child voluntarily goes off to his room or into some corner to play, let him alone. Don't disturb him until he finishes what he has in mind and emerges of his own accord.

The considerate, naturally polite child is not born, but made, and made not by blind teaching but by example in his own home. Respect your child and he will respect you.

Household Hints

Onions that are to be stored for winter use will keep much longer and without turning soft if a red-hot poker is held over the root end for a few minutes. This seals it and prevents the onions sprouting.

After partly whipping cream add a teaspoon of cold water before continuing. Repeat this several times till you get the required thickness. The water will not only make the cream lighter, but also increases the bulk, so that it goes much further.

But that isn't what I started out to column about . . . The man I met at the depot in Miami the night after I met Zangara—was J. David Stern, a pal of the President of the United States, and now the publisher of three American newspapers, one of which publishes me—the Cadmen (N. J.) Courier, . . . Mr. Stern, whose Philadelphia Record ruined the Vare machine and gave Philadelphia a Democratic regime (when the Republicans, like Tammany here, didn't believe such a thing could happen in Philadelphia) was on the same choo-choo aimed at the Pennsy depot in New York . . . During that 36-hour run I learned much—listening to Mr. Stern, who says: "Call me Dave" . . . He pioneered the Roosevelt boom for President two years before any one did . . . And he is a scrapping newspaperman . . . The staff of the Evening Post (which he has just purchased) need not to be startled if at any time Mr. Stern—after the manner of the stage reporter or editor—rushes into the place, hair mussed and suspenders down, and shouts: "Stop the presses—stop the presses—I gotta scoop!" . . . He's a newspaperman—a former reporter—who now sways legislatures—and Presidents!"

There is a "Dick Merriwell" or "Rover Boy" story about "Dave" Stern . . . A peculiar inheritance was left him by his father . . . Papa Stern's will contained this codicil—Dave was not to receive his inheritance, not a penny of it, "until he proves his worth" . . . So what happened? . . . So this happened . . . He connected with a newspaper—as a cub and not long after—was fired for telling the boss how to run the rag . . . With his savings, very little, and a small loan from a friend—he bought an emaciated paper—an afternoon gazette in a mid-western city . . . I think it was Springfield, Illinois . . . He got it for about 25 G's, it appears—and took the tittering of his competitors and others there—when many other men would have wilted and left the town—so derisive was their laughter and belittling . . . However, a few years later when the scoffers, who governed morning papers, discovered that Stern was giving them a fight—for circulation and advertising—they stopped making fun . . . How to get him out of town? There was a problem . . . Finally, they got him to go away . . . They bought his darn old newspaper—for a quarter of a million! What a punch line!

You see now why I like paragraphing about the craft . . . Even the copy boy in any editorial department has an aura about him . . . Some day that little boy may be my editor! . . . I get a kick, too, out of a story like this one—The Man Behind the Typewriter in the La Guardia Campaign . . . He is a pal of the next Mayor—he's a newspaperman—but a good one! . . . He it was who prepared many of Fiorello's campaign speeches and inspired the fighting major to say the right things at the right times . . . But when the rewards were being passed around by the successful candidate—he informed the next Mayor that he had been amply rewarded by the election results . . . He rejected a $15,000 political soft snap, thereby proving himself—a real newspaperman.

His name is Lowell Limpus.

Incidentally, a story you didn't see in the papers during the campaign for mayor was this one . . . You didn't see it—because when Mrs. La Guardia made the remark—the major said to the newspaperman in the living room at the time: 'Please promise me you won't use that—people might think we were using it for material to get votes or something" . . . And so it wasn't published . . . It's good New Yorkiana now, however . . . The scene is the living room at the La Guardia apartment. The cast is Mr. and Mrs. La Guardia and a reporter. They were trading talk about the campaign, which was then very young—or when McKee was the favorite—at 3 to 1 . . . There was a lull in the conversation, Mrs. La Guardia sighed . . . "What are you thinking about?" asked her husband . . . She smiled and softly said: "Well, dear—if you are elected—I guess we can get that living room rug."

I offer that story as testimony to the honesty of your next mayor—of a man who spent so many years in public office—and who still is so poor—he had to borrow $600 to campaign in New York . . . And I thought all politicians were full of larceny! Wotta a fellow is Fiorello! And so I bellow for Fiorello—whose heart is soft but not like jello, nor can he play upon the cello—nor is he yello.

Oh, wello—gabbing about my comrades and colleagues reminds me that December 17th is the 30th ann'y of the first flight of the Wrights—and this grand yarn about newspapermen . . . The old New York Tribune assigned one of the staff to check on the "wild story" of a country correspondent, who reported that men were actually flying! . . . The Trib man was instructed to prepare a Munchausen tale about it—and was suspended for two weeks when he came back and wrote a story that it was true!

But—the country yokel who got the story first—a reporter for the Norfolk (Va.) Virginian Pilot—queried dozens of papers around the country about whether they wanted the story by telegraph—and the poor guy got a lot of complaints—because he offered a "fake yarn" wire charges collect!

And to even matters they sent their refusals—collect!

And from a provincial friend comes this "Newspaperman Stuff" . . . Scott M. Thomas, editor of a Richmond paper, last week published his own account of being arrested for being plastered. . . . Editor Thomas put his story about his fall from grace right on his front page. The story read: "Scott M. Thomas, dry co-editor of the Richmond County Journal, mixed South Carolina corn liquor and Pennsylvania beer, drank too much of both and landed in jail Saturday. He remained incarcerated two hours, being bailed out by a friend. Yesterday he was taxed with the costs, $5.85. He was charged with being drunk, but from general reports he could have been charged with being disorderly."

The editor, who wrote his own story, wound it up with the assertion that "an editor who won't put his own misfortune in print has no right to publish another's."

Cagney Kicks Violently In Stanley

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

James Cagney isn't quite a lady killer in the film called "Lady Killer" in the Stanley. His pugnacity doesn't actually approximate homicide, yet it does extend to extreme and violent assault and battery. But James is quite vexed, so it is not difficult to sympathize with him in that respect. Still one can't entirely forget that a gent is supposed to be chivalrous. However, the ladies fall for Jim even if he ain't no gent. When he finds one in his bedroom at a time he is showing another lady friend around he becomes annoyed. Especially as he is much interested in the latter lady. And special especially as the lady in the bedroom had done him dirt. So when the one leaves with head in the air, hot and haughty, the other leaves shortly after, with feet in the air, kicked out with gridiron dexterity and decided emphasis.

"Lady Killer" is mostly comedy of the rough-house variety, but is just dramatic enough to lift slapstick technique out of the slapstick classification by the narrowest of squeaks. It will amuse the Cagney fans, and one imagines that it has no other purpose.

Our James, as ever, is a quick-witted chap, one who makes a set of piker crooks worthy of the attention of our best police. When things get warm he slips off to Hollywood, gets a job as photoplay extra, and makes himself a star by writing hundreds of "fan" letters. Just as he is going good, the old gang turns up, and it is the "moll" of the crew he finds unexpectedly in his slumber cell.

Before it ends he is arrested as a crook and is taken for "a ride," but James just outsmarts everybody, as you knew he would all the time.

Mae Clarke is the lady crook and Margaret Lindsay is the lady who turned away from that bedroom in disgust, as would befit the photoplay star she characterizes. They, as well as Cagney, and, in fact, all of the cast, do good work.

Acts and Film In Pitt

By ZORA D. UNKOVICH

Bated breath greeted the "slide for life" of Togo, sure-footed Japanese juggler, when, waving a painted parasol above him, he jumped upon a tight-rope and walked over the heads of the audience to the rail of the second balcony, in the opening act of this week's well-done stage show in the Pitt. And when, standing upright, he slid backward down the rope to the stage, a gaping audience applauded whole-heartedly.

The audience perhaps did not really gape but it did join in spontaneously with the spirit of black-face Archie Jones and Speedy Wilson in their twists of Negro humor and song. Of an entirely different twist was the act of Miss Vanessi and company, which avoided all simplicity of action for a sophisticated naughtiness. A parlor scene with so-termed drunken smartness for its motif and a highly dramatized "Shanghai Sal," were Miss Vanessi's settings for dances which didn't omit a single wiggle.

Hayes, Haig and Howe were the goofy guys of the show who believed in knocking about the stage no matter what the result. Dumbness, of a more boring variety, made the give-and-take gagging of Al Brant and Viola Kaye into a very ordinary act.

Everyone but mother participated in the dancing of the Robbins family in which Father Robbins, an extremely spry old gentleman, and his four sons and daughters somersaulted with an ease and smiling grace that was refreshing. Mary Haynes, a comehither redhead, chose music, not dancing, for her contribution to the program, and, with the aid of a few accessories, did various original song characters.

Lazy Bones, much abused melody, kept recurring through the acts, as did Chinese settings, but they both finally gave way in favor of wistful romance on the screen where Marian Marsh, Owen Moore and William Bakewell untangled trouble-beset romance within the white walls of a hospital, in "A Man of Sentiment."

Miss Wieck In Warner

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Dorothea Wieck, the German actress who created such a favorable impression in "Maedchen In Uniform" that she was signed by a Hollywood studio, is making her first appearance in an American-made film in the Warner, "Cradle Song," is the title of the picture, which is an adaptation of the play of the same title by G. M. Martinez Sierra, Spanish dramatist.

Most of the action is within the walls of a convent, in which Miss Wieck is a nun to whom the saving of souls is the most important thing in life. That is, until an abandoned child is found in the convent, and she is made its spiritual and foster-mother, the convent doctor taking the responsibility of foster-father. The drama of the play is in the effect of the child upon this kind woman, who rears her in the fond hope that she, too, will some day become a member of the sisterhood, and devote her life to a holy calling.

But girls do not stay in convents continually and forever, and when she is 17 worldly love catches up with her in the shape of a young engineer she meets when her foster-father takes her out to dinner. Of course, there is nothing the nuns can do but pray for her happiness as the honeymoon begins.

Besides Miss Wieck, the cast includes Evelyn Venable, also new to the screen, in the part of the girl; Sir Guy Standing, as the physician, and Kent Taylor, as the engineer.

'Y' Playhouse Group Offers Melodrama

The "Y" Playhouse tonight will present a melodrama, "Rope's End," the entire house is reserved for guests. Tuesday night a performance will be given for the [illegible] Playhouse is [illegible] a non-commercial basis and aims to produce important works of contemporary and classic dramatists. A permanent acting company and technical staff is being organized.

Civic Players Amusing In 'The Circle'

A good-sized audience in the Hotel Schenley Theater was abundantly amused last night by a presentation of "The Circle," comedy by W. Somerset Maugham that once served as a starring vehicle for John Drew and Mrs. Leslie Carter. It is a play that is highly English in flavor, taking its title from the fact that a circle is completed when a young wife departs from a husband whose mother had deserted his father in a similar way 30 years previously, both ladies being more interested in other gentlemen. To make it more intricate, the father, mother and her companion of 30 years are all on hand and try to dissuade the young lady.

Jean Dahl gives a credible characterization of the first eloping lady, a gushing creature, much affected, more than slightly passe, trying to be young and skittish. Fern Ball is natural as the young woman, other parts being portrayed by William Swartley, Alfred E. Smith, George Hildebrand, Emanuel Breakstone, Mary Hamilton and William Connelly.

Herman Liveright did a good job of directing. It will be repeated twice today.

For Reasons of Sentiment

IT WAS the same old story. Two men who loved the same woman. And the woman who loved herself.

First, there were the Masons, Daisy and Bill. During the first years of their marriage, they were fairly rich and plenty happy. At the end of six years, they were plenty poor and plenty unhappy. Bill was unhappy because Daisy was, and Daisy was unhappy on her own.

Their change of fortune came with the well-known and highly-unpopular crash of '29. After a couple of years of careless spending, they suddenly awakened to the fact that there was no Santa Claus for people their age. Their home wasn't paid for, and their furniture went back to the people who owned it.

And Bill Mason settled down to make the best of a small weekly salary and a cheap car. There was nothing small or cheap though, about Daisy's tirades. She was bitter over the fact that most of her jewelry went to pay their debts, and because her wardrobe was inexpensive and meager.

Her bitterness did not soften during the years that followed. She appeared to believe that Bill was personally responsible for their position.

"If you had been smarter," she told him contemptuously, "this wouldn't have happened. Plenty of men played the market and got out before the crash. Just my luck, I guess, to marry a man with no brains."

And Bill would sigh wearily and say nothing. He had long since learned the futility of arguing with Daisy. . . .

That was the state of affairs in the Mason household when Charlie Davis enters our story. Charlie was the sort of bird who instinctively did the right thing at exactly the right time. So it is not strange that he should have entered Daisy's life at the psychological moment.

Charlie and Bill had been close friends. But it was 10 years or more since they had met. It was, therefore, a distinct shock to both when they discovered each other's financial condition. For while Bill had grown poorer in worldly goods, Charlie had prospered mightily. At 30, he was a rich man. A smart one, too. So said Charlie himself.

"I can honestly say," he declared, "that anything I've got, I earned through using the old gray matter. Yes, sir, you can talk all you want to about lucky breaks, but I know that it's brains that count."

During this modest little speech, Daisy Mason was gazing at him with admiration. Here, she thought, was a man after her own heart. She urged him to tell them further of his triumphs. Mentally, she was wondering just how much the man was worth.

Of course, the inevitable happened. Charlie fell for Daisy's unconcealed admiration. And Daisy fell for Charlie's bankroll.

Charlie's proposal was typical of the man.

"Listen, baby," he said, "you come with me and I'll give you anything you want. We'll make a great pair, with my brains and your looks. What's the sense in your sticking any longer with a guy as dumb as Bill?

"He never had any brains and he never will have. He'll never be able to give you anything. What do you say, honey? Is it a go?"

How could Daisy resist such a proposition. She couldn't. She made a weak and not very sincere objection.

"I sort of hate to do it," she demurred. "Bill is really fond of me. This will break him all up. I hate to tell him, Charlie. It's so near Christmas and all. I hate to make him feel bad."

"You leave it all to me," her gallant lover assured her. "I'll do the talking. I'll make him see things right. He'll give you a divorce, if that's what you want."

So Daisy said what had been in her mind all the time. She said: "Very well, Charlie, I'll do what you say. I'll let you handle everything."

She stayed away from home most of the next day, and when she returned in the evening, Bill was nowhere in sight. A little later, Charlie came. He was grinning broadly.

"Was it all right?" Daisy asked him. "Did you talk to Bill?"

"Yeah, sure. I was here with him this afternoon. Everything's okay."

"He didn't make any objections?" she questioned. "He didn't threaten to make things unpleasant or anything like that?"

"That sap?" Charlie's grin was broader than ever. "He hasn't got enough brains for that. He just checked out. Staying at a club till you're gone."

"Then," said Daisy with a sigh of relief, "everything's set."

"Sure. We got nothing to worry about now. And I got a swell surprise for you, baby. Maybe your eyes aren't going to open when you see this!"

He drew a long velvet box from his pocket.

The woman exclaimed inanely: "for me?"

"Sure for you. Who'd you think? And wait'll I tell you how I got it. Bill had it for you for a Christmas present. He offered to sell it to me because he wouldn't have any use for it now. It's my engagement present, Daisy, and if you ask me, it's some present!"

Daisy stared at the diamond necklace she held in her hand.

"You bought it from Bill?" she asked slowly.

"Yep, and I paid plenty for it, too. Aren't you pleased?" he asked anxiously. Don't you like it? It's all yours, honey."

"Mine!" The woman's voice rose in a scream. "Of course it's mine, you sap! This is one of the few pieces of jewelry we didn't sell. Bill made me keep it for sentimental reasons.

"He gave it to me eight years ago as an engagement present!"

Speed Crash On Screen

Daredevil automobile drivers, skidding and crashing as they race in Los Angeles, are pictured in the current issue of the Hearst Metrotone News. There is a description of the race by the Globe Trotter. The car driven by Art Boyce is struck by another car, plunges up a high bank, rips through 40 feet of fence and turns over. Boyce is carried off the track while the other cars whirl on.

A free-for-all battle on the ice is among the exciting incidents in the hockey game between the New York Americans and the Rangers, in New York.

New York City is seen fighting its way out from under a blanket of snow as Old Man Winter arrives early.

Notables of the stage, screen and society donate dolls in a raffle to aid the New York American's Christmas and Relief Fund. All of the dolls brought to the exhibition have been dressed from top to toe by the donors for the sake of sweet charity.

Mrs. Roosevelt is shown picking out Christmas presents for her grandchildren, Sistie and Buzzie.

Distilleries in Montreal and other Canadian cities are working overtime manufacturing and bottling liquor for the United States.

Dixie society belles hold a pig race at Pinehurst, North Carolina.

Arlayne Brown, 17-year-old St. Louis girl, gives an exhibition of marksmanship with revolver and rifle, her father holding targets in his hands and mouth.

Secretary of Labor Perkins, in a talk to Metrotone, outlines the progress of the NRA. She shows that the President's recovery plan is producing steady and satisfactory results.

Note—Because of the necessity upon theater managers to arrange programs in time schedules, it is possible that some of the subjects in the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.

STAR GOSSIP

Doug Writing Script for Lederer

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 16.—Friends of Douglass Fairbanks, Jr., will be amazed to hear why he rushes home from the RKO studio and burns midnight oil.

The young star is writing a screen story for Francis Lederer, the temperamental Czecho-Slovakian actor, who has almost the whole say on his film vehicles.

It all came about quite unexpectedly. Doug, Jr., and Lederer renewed their acquaintance by having lunch together the other day at RKO. During the conversation, Doug outlined a play that he was planning to write.

An enthusiastic listener, Lederer finally declared it was just the sort of story he wants for his second picture and asked young Doug to write it for him.

So the two now have their heads together and you eventually may see the unusual title:

"What Manner of Man," starring Francis Lederer and written by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

"Rosy" Rosenberg, Southern California's great all-America guard, has doffed his football uniform and is learning to be an assistant director on the "Disillusion" set at Fox.

"By the time they are playing their last year of college football," he says, "most fellows realize that the headlines don't mean a thing. If they need any convincing, they only have to look at the all-Americans of a few years back.

"I expect to be forgotten in a few weeks, and am glad to get a job."

The one-punch fight between George Raft and Barney Glazer had been brewing for a long time. Georgie had been protesting that line in "Bolero" ever since he read the script, and had made several futile attempts to talk to studio officials about it. Though he usually holds himself carefully under control, Georgie's friends will tell you that he is a very hot-tempered guy.

Grey Tale Title Out For That of Song

The title of "The Border Legion" has been changed by Paramount to "The Last Round-up." The popular cowboy ballad of that name will be featured in the picture and the title change was the result, although the story is based on Zane Grey's famous novel, Barbara Adams, new Paramount player; Randolph Scott and Monte Blue are cast in leading roles.

Penn Jungle Film Stars Laughton

By MARGARET RUSSELL

Charles Laughton, whose cinema interpretation of Henry VIII is still fresh in the minds of Pittsburgh moviegoers, adds a new and exceedingly interesting portrait to his gallery of film characterizations as Horace Prin in "White Woman" in the Penn.

It is doubtful if even a Lionel Barrymore could approximate his portrayal of the bloated Englishman, king of a jungle island river, who drops his "haitches" and rules his native empire with a soft hand and a slippery tongue.

His characterization is so highly intensified as to almost verge on a caricature, at times. And many of his words are lost in the maize of his sadly drooping mustache and his English cockney accent. But his face and his eyes, the slouch of his body, the play of his hands are articulate beyond any mere words.

Carole Lombard goes through the gestures of a "White Woman" in the grip of powerful circumstances beyond her control in the tropics, a conventional role, adequately performed, with a nice restraint sometimes, and at others, with a little too heavy stress on the dramatics.

Charles Bickford is his own swashbuckling self and Kent Taylor does some fine bits of acting. Not a pretty picture, but worth seeing, if only for Laughton alone.

In addition to the feature, there is a Mickey Mouse picture, a Ted Healy comedy, "Plane Nuts," a Traveltalk, "A Day in Venice" and Hearst Metrotone News.

McCready as an Actor Bows Sunday

Harrison R. McCready, society playboy, whose latest ambition is to be a dramatic actor, will make his initial bow before the footlights in the Variety at the Sunday midnight show. The "playboy" will appear in a cabaret scene at each matinee and evening performance of "Broadway Scandals." Bee Kellar, known as the "Mae West of Burlesque," will play opposite him in the skit. For the past few days McCready has been at his mountain lodge near Grantsville, Md., studying his part.

"I'm absolutely on the square this time," McCready says. "I want to adopt a career and I believe the stage is just the thing for me. I know many people thinks it is just another one of my whims, but all I ask is a chance to make good."

PITTSBURGHER HOPES TO RETURN TO MAJORS

Many a young ball player might lose heart on finding himself sent back to the minor leagues after three full seasons in the big show, but the action of the St. Louis Browns in shipping Jimmy Levey to Hollywood in the Pacific Coast League in a three-player trade for Allen Strange has had no such effect on the Pittsburgh shortstop. Levey is made of stouter stuff. Far from being discouraged or grumbling over the adverse turn of the baseball fates, Jimmy says he actually welcomes the shift as a helpful change of scenery that will give him a chance to make a fresh start, with a determination to come back to the majors some day a better player in every respect. And that's a spirit that usually wins.

Jimmy Levey

The Pittsburgher's friends contend that conditions on the Browns last season affected the work of Levey, as well as that of other players on the club. For another thing, it is held that Jimmy, one of the fastest and best fielding shortstop in the game, was handicaped in being made to hit left-handed, as he is naturally a right-hand batter and his style was cramped by the change.

Levey takes a sensible view of his transfer to the Coast. He realizes that the surest path back to the majors is to go out there and prove his worth, and says that's what he means to do, being determined to hustle from the start and confident that a new environment and a return to his natural batting style will enable him to show the best form of his career.

Just turned 26, Levey still has a long stretch of baseball usefulness ahead of him, and his three years of big league experience will be an item in his favor when some of the major clubs start looking around the minors for a new shortstop. Friends of the young Pittsburgher share his confidence that his return to the minors is only temporary, and that it won't be long until he is back in the main tent.

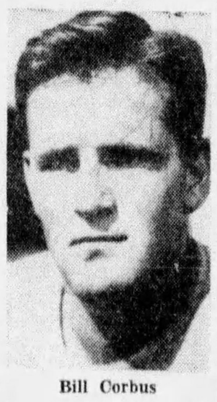
BOWMAN SEEN AS WINNER FOR GIANTS

As though the prospect of having to cope with Carl Hubbell, Hal Schumacher, Bud Parmelee, Fred Fitzsimmons and the rest of the old staff again next year were not a sufficient source of worry to the National League clubs aiming to beat out the Giants, the prediction is made by Roy Mack, son of Connie, that Bill Terry will come up with still another winning pitcher.

The new hurler is Joe Bowman, whom the New York club bought recently from Portland, in the Pacific Coast League. Bowman was one of the Coast League players who toured Mexico this fall under the management of Mack. Connie's son goes so far as to pronounce Joe the most improved pitcher in the minor leagues, and declares he can't fail to make good with the Giants.

RIVAL BOWL CAPTAINS REAL STARS

There have been football captains who were not outstanding players; captains who were even beaten out by rival candidates for regular positions on their own elevens. But the men who will captain the opposing teams in the Rose Bowl game on New Year's Day are leaders in more than name. They are stars who inspire their mates with their own brilliant play. Cliff Montgomery, Columbia's captain and quarterback, a product of Kiski and a resident of Natrona Heights, Pa., was all-scholastic back three times in high school and has kept up his great gridiron work since entering college. He is famed for his broken field running and all-around backfield skill, and New York critics refuse to admit that he has a superior anywhere. Montgomery is 23, stands 5 feet 9½ inches and weighs 165 pounds.



Bill Corbus

Bill Corbus, who has acted as captain in all of Stanford's big games, was seen in action against Pitt at the Stadium here in 1932 and no dissenting voices were raised around here when he was picked as all-America guard. This year he is everybody's choice for another "all" appointment. Coast experts call Corbus the perfect lineman, the player without a weakness.

PLANS FOR HEAVYWEIGHT FIGHTS BLOCKED

Jack Dempsey appears to be the only promoter able to clinch an attractive heavyweight fight. The plan of eastern showmen to give the heavies a big play has struck one snag after another. The proposed meeting of Walter Neusel and Lou Barba in Newark fell through when Barba refused to fight unless given an extra week to get in shape. Barba thinks he might be able to beat Neusel if in trim, but says he doesn't fancy the idea of being made part of a build-up campaign for the German.

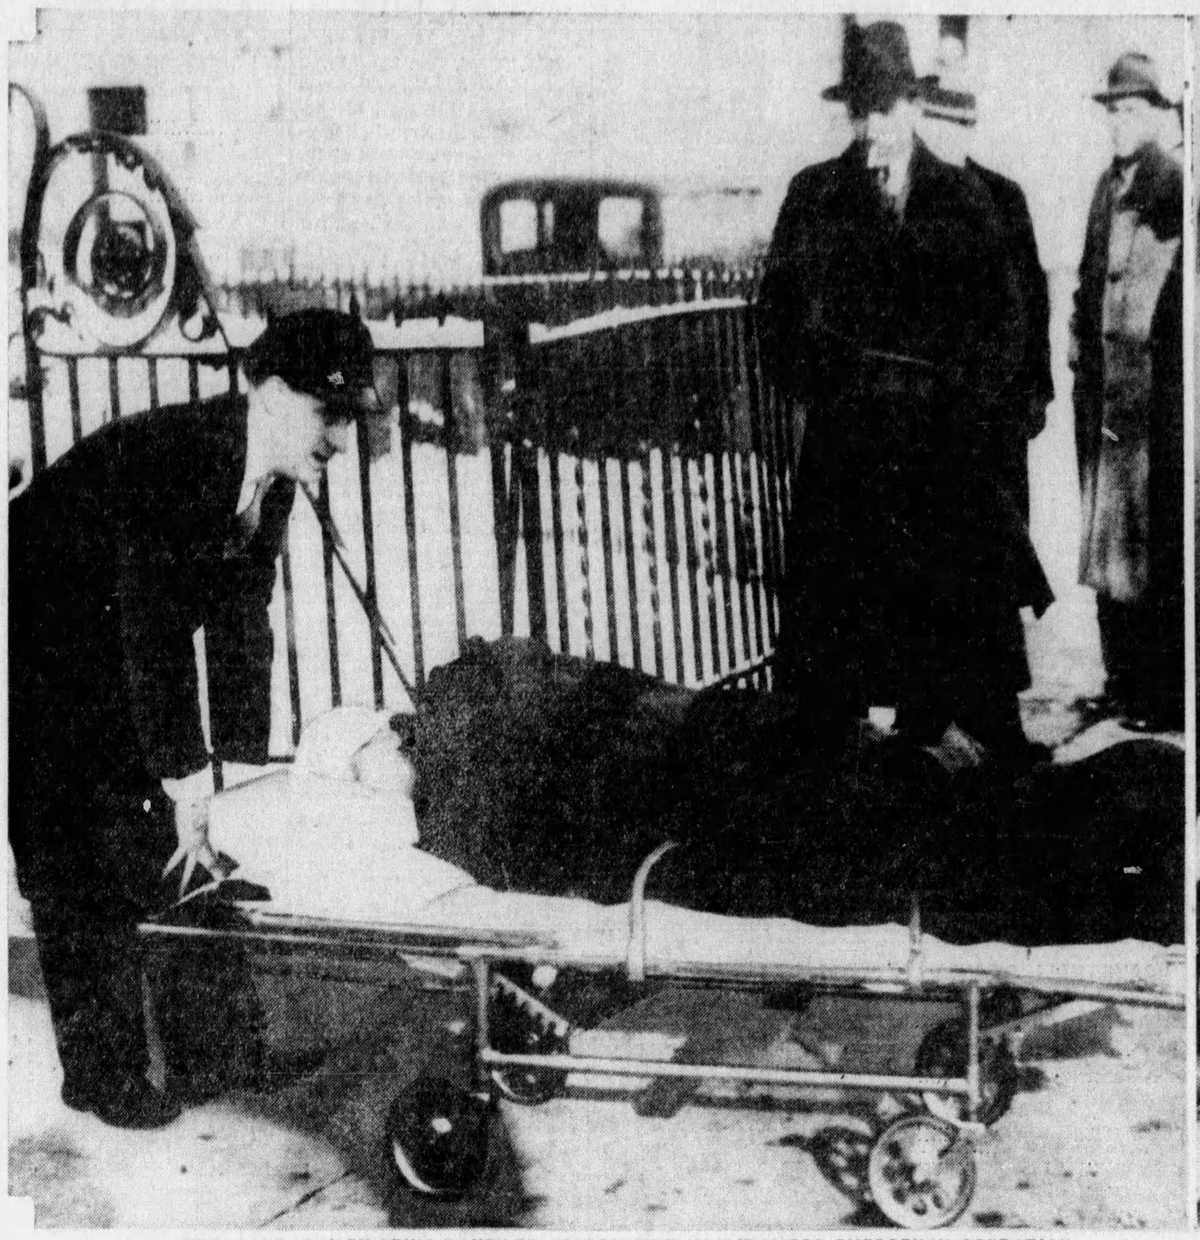
Next Neusel's hopes of fighting Ray Impellittiere in New York on December 22 were dashed when the Imp's manager turned down an offer of 35 per cent rather than let his protege perform in Madison Square Garden, indicating that the boycott is still on. Then Philadelphia promoters tried to match Tommy Loughran and Impellittiere for 15 rounds, but Loughran rejected a guarantee of $7,500. Manager Joe Smith frankly admitting that Tommy wants no part of the Imp at this time. And when the Madison Square Garden people again suggested to Max Baer a title match with Primo Carnera for next summer, Baer repeated his declaration that he will not fight the champion under Garden promotion unless Dempsey is cut in for a large share of the profits.

MORENZ-JOLIAT OLDEST ICE PARTNERSHIP

Howie Morenz and Aurel Joliat, center and left wing, respectively, well remembered by local fans as two of the most brilliant players at Duquesne Garden in Pittsburgh's National League days, still are carrying on for Les Canadiens as the oldest partnership in hockey. Max Kase finds that this is the eleventh consecutive season in which they have played side by side, a longer association than that of the Cook brothers and Boucher, of the New York Rangers, or any other surviving combination in the game.

Howie Morenz

Morenz and Joliat have seen some noted lines come and go, including Nighbor, Denenny and Broadbent; Stewart, Smith and Seibert; Weiland, Clapper and Gainor; and the Green brothers and Burch. Even in their own line, the two star forwards of Les Canadiens have outlasted a couple of right wingers who combined with them down the years. First there was Billy Boucher. He passed on in favor of Art Gagne, and now Gagne has been replaced by Johnny Gagnon. But there is no indication that Morenz and Joliat have reached the end of the hockey trail.



IRVIN (ACE) BAILEY BEING TAKEN TO BOSTON CITY HOSPITAL FOR EMERGENCY OPERATION

Ace Bailey, Toronto Maple Leafs hockey star, is fighting for his life in a Boston hospital as a result of a brain injury received in a riotous engagement against the Bruins in Boston, Tuesday night. A delicate brain operation was performed. His wife and child, Joan, 3, raced from Toronto to be with him in the emergency. These are International News Photograph Service pictures.

WIFE AND CHILD OF INJURED STAR

BAILEY HOLDS OWN AFTER OPERATION

BOSTON, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—Medical science has given of its best to Irvin (Ace) Bailey, Toronto hockey player, and today his recovery lay largely outside its scope.

Surgeons who rate high as brain specialists have attended him constantly since his skull was fractured Tuesday night during the Maple Leafs-Boston Bruins hockey game at Boston Garden.

Dr. Donald Munro, premier brain surgeon of the Boston City Hospital staff, gave out his latest official bulletin late yesterday. He said:

"Irvin Bailey is not as well this afternoon as he was this morning. The late reaction is common in this type of severe brain injury. He will not be operated on again for the present. There is no immediate danger."

At 3 a. m. today doctors at City Hospital reported Bailey's condition as fair and unchanged since Dr. Munro's bulletin.

Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League, and Frank Patrick, its managing director, came to Boston yesterday to investigate the accident. They said a meeting of league governors had been called for next Wednesday night in Montreal to take action on the case. Disposition of the cases of Shore and Red Horner, Bailey's teammate who dropped Shore with a punch to the jaw after Shore had knocked Bailey down also will be discussed. Both are under suspension.

GLENDON DEATH HELD ACCIDENT

CHATHAM, Mass., Dec. 16.—(AP.)—A state police investigation into the death of Richard (Rich) Glendon, Columbia rowing coach, instigated by District Attorney William C. Crossley, was concluded upon determination that it was homicide.

Because of certain aspects of the case, Crossley yesterday assigned State Police Detective Ernest Bradford and Assistant District Attorney Frank E. Smith to it. Glendon was found, a gunshot wound in his side, in an isolated spot near the beach yesterday by a policeman participating in a search for him. He had left his home the day before, ostensibly to go hunting. Members of Glendon's family were questioned.

Marshall Causes Riot in Mat Bout

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 16.—Police were required to quell a riot here last night as Jim Londos, claimant of the world heavyweight wrestling title, was awarded the verdict over Everett Marshall, of La Junta, Col., when Marshall was disqualified for fouling.

Marshall attempted to jump on Londos after the latter had been thrown over the ropes and onto the ring's apron. When Referee Ben Paul attempted to pull him off, he struck him. He then hit a police captain who led several uniformed men into the ring. landed a couple of blows on Bill Sandow, Londos' manager, and finally was floored by several policemen.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE THROAT PIN—A cuff-link pin, made with two one and one-half carat diamonds, pierced through the tender flesh of the throat, is the form of personal adornment chosen by Mrs. Jake Hamon, of Ardmore, Okla. She wears it in memory of her husband, a famous oil operator of Oklahoma, who was murdered a few years ago. This unique and bizarre idea came to Mrs. Hamon while she was on a trip through Africa, where many such examples of finery may be found—all forms and sizes of metallic decorations used in the ears, noses, lips and bodies of the natives.

LOCAL QUINTET TRIUMPHS BY 52-32 SCORE

By JESS CARVER

A second Pittsburgh varsity basketball team has come through its inaugural tilt of the 1933-34 campaign with flying colors. Last night, before a disappointing opening night turn-out of fans in the Bluff gym, Duquesne University's champion Dukes routed Waynesburg's Yellow Jackets, 52 to 32, gaining the greater portion of the advantage with a scoring splurge during the last eight minutes of play.

Pitt's Panthers cracked the local campaign last Saturday night by beating Georgetown in an Intercollegiate Conference game. Carnegie Tech does not set sail until January 6.

DUKES IMPRESSIVE

Playing in impressive fashion, even though it was their first start of the year, the Dukes served notice on all and sundry that they must again be accounted one of the strongest basketball machines in the East, if not in the country. Paul Birch, star of last year's drive, was out of the action, recuperating from a recent tonsil operation, but Bill Murphy filled in at a forward post very well indeed.

The Dukes, trailing by a point for the first minute and a half of play, swept to the fore when Joe Zerilla, starting at a guard, popped one from a step or two past the foul line and never were headed. For a time during the first half, they held a 10-point advantage, but the Jackets rallied and, led by Rab Currie and Joe Janosik, pulled up to within a point of the locals at 19 to 18. Here, however, the Red and Blue turned on the power again and at the half were out in front by a count of 23 to 18.

Coach Chick Davies, of the Dukes, started a somewhat makeshift lineup. His veteran regular guards, Marty Reiter and Dudey Moore, both were on the bench and it was Davies' plan not to use either unless absolutely necessary, as both are nursing injuries, Moore a sore ankle and Reiter a foot infection. But when the Jackets crept to within a point of the home boys in went Marty and Dudey and "in" went the ball game.

Irving Brenner dominated the scoring in the first half, as he did throughout the game, by scoring 10 points. He accounted for nine more in the second half.

LOCALS STEP OUT

The Dukes lost little time in stepping out to gain a commanding lead as the second half got under way, and this time, the best the Jackets could do in the way of whittling it down was to get to to 30 point mark when the Dukes had 37. The contest turned into a near rout as it drew into its closing minutes, with the Dukes scoring almost at will.

Waynesburg's play was featured by the sparkling performance of Rab Currie, who tossed three goals

SMITH SHOWS CLASS BEATING YOUNG TERRY

TED YAROSZ' CONQUEROR LOSES HERE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

If Young Terry, of Trenton, N. J., really defeated our Teddy Yarosz in their recent bout in Newark, N. J., then Teddy isn't the fighter the folks around here think he is. That decision was disputed at the time, and what happened at the Arena, on the North Side, last night, tended to bear out the contention.

For Terry came here to show the folks how he did it, using Jimmy Smith, of Philadelphia, as his foil, and all Jimmy did was to beat him from here to there and back again both ways from the starting point.

It wasn't a fast fight, but it was a good one, with Terry doing the rushing and Smith doing the punching. Smith, who holds a victory over Lou Brouillard, former middleweight champion, proved himself a sharpshooter with his right hand. He can do as many things with that right as Young Saylor used to be able to do with his educated left—and ain't 'at sumpin'! He shoots it straight, overhand and underhand and equally well to the head or body.

JIMMY EASY WINNER

An orthodox boxer, Jimmy does something few ringmen can do—he actually leads with his right and counters with his left. All through the bout last night he was doing that and all but blasting Terry's head off his shoulders and ripping his heart out of his body.

Terry won only three rounds, the sixth, in which he managed to break through Smith's close quarters defense and do some body punching, and the last two rounds, in which he was the aggressor after Smith tried to knock him out at the start of the ninth and tired and had to rest up.

As for points scored, Smith was a mile in front at the final bell, although one of the judges, Mike Moran, voted for a draw, and Referee Al Grayber had to make the correct decision, which coincided with that of the other judge, Jock Simco.

GIVES AWAY WEIGHT

Smith is a cool, smart worker, a sharp puncher with his right hand and no slouch with the left to the body. Terry is short and heavy-set and the type you'd expect to go great against another rip-tearing slugger. A fast, shifty fellow like Yarosz figures to beat him without any trouble. The chances now are that, instead of fighting Terry here to demonstrate that the Newark decision wasn't all it was supposed to be, Teddy will be called upon to battle Smith when he gets ready to go again shortly after the first of the New Year.

Smith, at 157¼ pounds, gave away 6¼ pounds to his opponent, but was master of the situation from the opening gong. Midway in the opening round, one of his whistling rights knocked Terry spraddle-legged for no count, and he went down again after getting half way up. In the ninth, both slipped down. There was no counting.

The crowd wasn't up to expectations, but the winner against Yarosz should be something else again.

DI PIERO STOPPED

Don McCorkingdale, South African heavyweight, and his wife were ringside spectators. They are on their way to Chicago, where Don boxes King Levinsky on December 29. McCorkingdale was introduced from the ring, along with Yarosz and Dan Hassett, a Philadelphia light-heavyweight.

A corking technical knockout was provided by an eleventh-hour substitute, Red Bruce, Negro light-heavyweight, who floored Tony Di Piero with a left and right to the jaw, face downward, late in the second round of the semi-final. Di Piero was groggy when he got up at the count of nine and Referee Joe Zivic called a halt. It was Bruce's fight all of the way.

Marty Gornick, Whitaker welterweight, knocked out Young Bordell, of New Kensington, after one minute of the fifth round. He had a lot of trouble with his opponent and never did hit his best stride. It wasn't much of a fight.

Johnny Durso again bested Johnny Birek in one of their typical hot duels, and General Burrows won over Ray Winbush in the six-round opener.

By CARL W. SHATTO

Two heavy storms broke in the Pittsburgh district last night, and very few more like them will be required to leave the ancient sport of box lacrosse in danger of being washed up here.

Storm No. 1 was a rainstorm that broke somewhere between here and Toronto with such vigor that the Toronto Maple Leafs, traveling by motor bus, were delayed several hours in reaching Pittsburgh for their North American Professional Lacrosse Association tilt with the local Yellow Jackets.

TORONTO OUTCLASSED

Storm No. 2 broke around the Toronto cage as the Jackets, completely outclassing their tired, hungry, inferior opponents, slammed home goals with almost monotonous regularity to win by the lopsided margin of 19 to 6.

Because of storm No. 1 the Leafs did not arrive at Motor Square Garden, the scene of the conflict, until 8:50, 20 minutes after the game was scheduled to get under way. They appeared on the floor at 9:10, and the initial faceoff was at 9:20, at which time Teddy Gillman, the Leafs' goalie, still was in the dressing room donning his armor.

The crowd, numbering approximately 1,000, endured the delay with surprising good nature, but the quality of opposition which the Leafs provided did little to recompense the fans for their display of patience. From the time Leo Bouliane drove home the first tally, after 55 seconds of play, until Harry LaFrance recorded Pittsburgh's nineteenth score, four seconds before the finish, the Leafs never really constituted a threat. They were outweighed, outspeeded and outconditioned just as much as the first half score of 10-1 would indicate.

The victory left Pittsburgh in a tie with Buffalo for first place in the race, and unless the circuit can produce much tougher opposition than the Toronto aggregation, the Jackets do not figure to lose a game this year. The locals came here hailed as world champions, and they look to be champions by such an extremely wide margin as to make the league topheavy.

BOULIANE BIG STAR

Bouliane, Odie Core and Harry LaFrance enjoyed field days at the expense of the Leafs, the former caging five goals, and Core and LaFrance four each. Bruce Cordick played brilliantly in the Pittsburgh net, and Gillman, the Leafs' goal guardian, stopped so many shots that his suit of felt padding broke in the middle and sagged dangerously during the last two periods.

Of the visitors, Player-Coach Russ Spaulding represented most of their attacking power, and William Grayson made a bid for fame by masquerading behind a nose guard.

The Buffalo Indians, a team made up of Seneca and Huron Indians, are to play here Tuesday, and the Tribesmen (it's their game, by the way) had better make a pretty good job of putting the Indian sign on the Jackets if the wound which last night's tilt put in Pittsburgh lacrosse is to be healed. The lineup:

PITTSBURGH—19.		TORONTO—6.

PRIMO AGREES TO TERMS FOR TITLE BOUT

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—For the first time in 39 years, Florida will play host to a heavyweight championship bout this winter if Madison Square Garden can clear up a few little odds and ends.

The Garden announced yesterday that Primo Carnera had agreed to defend his title against Tommy Loughran in Miami, February 22, but no contracts have been signed and Primo still will have to get approval from Louis Soresi, Italian banker who shares the champion's management with Bill Duffy.

Carnera insists, however, that Soresi quickly will give his consent to the bout, first heavyweight title match in Florida since Jim Corbett knocked out Charley Mitchell at Jacksonville and first winter duel for the championship since Jack Dempsey beat Bill Brennan in the old Garden in 1920.

Although Garden officials said Loughran had agreed to the match, there were rumblings that the Philadelphian, who conquered Jack Sharkey and Ray Impellitiere in his last two starts, still was seeking to get better terms than the 12½ per cent of the receipts customarily granted challengers.

But close followers of the game were convinced Tommy, however much he might argue over the financial arrangements, would not pass up an opportunity to win the title he has wanted for so long. He thinks he can whip the big champion.

PITT BEATEN BY PURDUE

EVANSTON, Ill., Dec. 16.—Smarting from the sting of a defeat served them in Lafayette, Ind., last night by the Purdue University varsity quintet, the University of Pittsburgh's Golden Panthers of basketball prepared to battle Northwestern's Wildcats here tonight in the second contest of their three-game invasion of the Mid-West.

The Panthers dropped a rough and tumble game to the Boilermakers last night, 33 to 27.

The game produced a mixture of football and basketball. A total of 25 personal fouls were called as players were tumbled about the floor, and Cribbs, of Pitt, and Fehring, of Purdue, were forced from the game in the second half with four offenses each.

Although the Boilermakers led practically all the way, their margin seldom was more than three points.

Cottom led the Purdue scoring with three field goals and three fouls, while Cribbs scored four field goals to lead his team. The lineup:

PITTSBURGH—27.	G.	F.	Pts.	PURDUE—33.	G.	F.	Pts.

SCHOOL LEAGUE CONFAB TODAY

By JULIUS LEVIN

A regular meeting of the officials of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League was scheduled at the Fifth Avenue High School today. Reports will be made by the football and basketball committees of the league.

All members of the league are requested to use the Forbes street entrance to the school as the Liquor Control Board is holding its examinations in the old building.

Coaches of the various schools are asked to bring their list of open football dates to the meeting.

JOCK TO SPEAK

Dr. John B. (Jock) Sutherland, coach at the University of Pittsburgh, will be the principal speaker at the annual football banquet of the Ambridge High School in the Ambridge Junior High School in Ambridge Monday evening. Ambridge went through its second successive season without meeting defeat. A tie with Midland ruined its chances for the retention of the Class A title, won by Scott High, of North Braddock.

Midland High School holds its football banquet Wednesday evening at Midland, while the same evening in Charleroi, the Cougars will be honored. Howard Harpster, coach at Carnegie Tech, will be the main speaker at Charleroi.

SCHOOL FIVES BUSY

Some close and well-played battles featured the scholastic basketball program of yesterday afternoon and last night.

Among the City League teams, still engaged in pre-season struggles, South Hills bested Dormont, 28 to 27; Allegheny nosed out Connelley, 24 to 23; Vocational downed its Alumni, 61 to 24; Schenley toppled Mt. Lebanon, 32 to 24, and Perry lost to Bellevue, 32 to 27.

SOCCER SQUAD DELAYED

Stormy weather delayed the arrival of the Celtic soccer team, of Rochester, N. Y., today for its game in the last qualifying round of the National Challenge Cup competition to be played at Greenlee Field.

The Celtics were scheduled to work out this afternoon, but latest reports were that the players would not reach Pittsburgh until early in the evening.

The kickoff tomorrow is scheduled for 2:30.

Central League soccer games hold the spotlight this afternoon. The best game of the day should be played at the Westinghouse High School Stadium with Arsenal facing the Clan Douglas outfit. Aliquippa meets Old Carnegie at Beadling, Union Switch goes to Ambridge, and the Pittsburgh Rovers hook up with Beltzhoover at Warrington avenue.

In the Panhandle League, Lincoln Hill meets Houston on the latter's grounds.

PONZI SUFFERS FIRST DEFEAT

CHICAGO, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—James Caras, of Wilmington, Del., and Erwin Rudolph, of Cleveland, today had an opportunity to gain valuable ground on Andrew Ponzi, of Philadelphia, the leader, who last night suffered his first setback of the world pocket billiards title tournament.

Ponzi lost to Frank Taberski, of Schenectady, N. Y., 125 to 93, in 10 innings, breaking his string of consecutive victories in the tournament at six.

Rudolph faced Ralph Greenleaf, New York, the defending champion, this afternoon, and Caras, will meet George Kelly, of Philadelphia, tonight. Pasquale Natalie, of Chicago, and Charles Seaback, of Astoria, N. Y., were matched in the other afternoon game.

Greenleaf yesterday lost to Caras by forfeit, being disqualified for insistently protesting a decision by Referee Joseph Ferguson. Greenleaf claimed a foul, and when Ferguson ruled otherwise, argued so long that he was disqualified. The victory put Caras in a tie with Rudolph for second place.

Kelly, the national titleholder, was defeated, 125 to 29, in 16 innings, by Benny Allen, of Kansas City.

STOCK MARKET FINISHES WITH HEAVY TONE

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—The stock market was subjected to a rather vigorous bear drive today and quoted values sagged 1 to 3 or more point before some support arrived. The selling flurry lasted about half an hour, but the volume in this period was the heaviest of the brief session. The close was heavy. Transfers approximated 900,000 shares.

Traders who expected a boost in the gold price were again disappointed and many apparently decided, under the circumstances, to try for a short play. Indecision as to next week's news, however, brought scattered short covering just before the finish. Most of the leaders, however, ended around their lows. Wheat and corn dropped about a cent a bushel in early transactions, cotton was a bit lower and other commodities were ragged. Foreign exchanges were fairly firm. Bonds were mixed.

Share losers of 1 to 2 or more points included American Telephone, Western Union, Allied Chemical, United States Steel, Continental Can, Sante Fe, New York Central, Union Pacific, United States Industrial Alcohol, Case, American Smelting, Chrysler, Deere, American Tobacco B, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Bethlehem Steel and others. National Distillers showed resistance and closed unchanged. Consolidated Gas also was only off a small fraction.

While bullish brokerage circles were not so optimistic as during the past few days, proponents of the advance were still holding out hopes for an old-fashioned Christmas market. These expressed the opinion that further advances in the gold price would start soon and that equities would also respond the continued reports of improving business and industry.

Some analysts, however, pointed out that the short interest in stocks was still negligible, notwithstanding today's flurry, and that sponsorship seemed for the moment to be lacking. It was also thought, in some quarters, that the better business outlook may have been already discounted to some extent.

WHEAT CLOSES IRREGULAR

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Week-end evening up of accounts lifted wheat in the late dealings today and largely overcame earlier losses.

A strengthening influence for wheat prices came from reports of persistent lack of moisture throughout domestic winter wheat territory southwest. Official estimates of the 1933 wheat crop in 41 countries exclusive of Russia and China totaled 3,250,304,000 bushels, against 3,459,287,000 harvested last year, a reduction of 6 per cent.

Wheat closed irregular at ½ cent decline to ⅛ advance compared with yesterday's finish, corn ⅞ to 1⅜ down, oats ¼ to ½ off and provisions unchanged to 5 cents lower.

STEEL RATE UP AS SUPPLIES DIMINISH

By B. E. V. LUTY

Production of steel this week is 15 per cent greater than the average last month and more than double the rate of last December.

The official forecast of steel ingot production for the week was 31.5 per cent of capacity, against 28.3 per cent for last week and the recent low of 25.2 per cent, for the week ended November 11. The rate indicated for this week is about 21,500,000 tons a year, while the year's total may be forecast at about 22,900,000 tons, or several hundred thousand tons more than could be forecast five weeks ago, when it was expected production in the remainder of the year would average between 20 and 25 per cent.

The causes of this reversal in the production trend are readily recognized, but their relative importance cannot be appraised closely and that makes an awkward circumstance, because one of the causes directly detracts from the outlook for January. Some steel is being called for this month to take advantage of expiring prices, below the recent and present market, and to the extent that such steel is stocked shipments in January will be correspondingly lighter. The movement is marked in wire products and to a lesser degree in merchant bars. While there is a heavy movement of tin plate for the same price reason, that need not be considered with reference to ingot production, because most of the steel being rolled into tin plate was made some time ago.

CONTRA-SEASONAL RISE

Another influence making for heavier production at this time is further reduction in stocks of steel and manufacturers of steel accumulated during the recent phenomenal bulge in production, and that influence makes an augury for further improvement.

The usual, and natural, course is for steel production to decrease from November to December and the marked increase is a more or less favorable sign no matter how caused. The seasonal influence affects deliveries of finished steel to customers and production of steel in still greater degree because mills try to reduce their stocks of ingots and semi-finished steel, all for the purpose of having December 31 inventories as low as possible.

The showing being made indicates that seasonal and other improvement after January 1 will start from a higher level than was expected a month ago. Apart from an analysis of the statistics there is the fact that sentiment in the steel trend has been improving for five weeks, largely by reason of customers expressing more favorable views as to their prospective requirements.

The first large increase in steel demand will come from the automobile industry, which is experiencing delays in getting into quantity production of new models. When the industry reaches its gait, probably by some time in January, its additional requirements should represent half a dozen points in the general steel producing rate.

'PAY POINT' RAISED

Since the institution of the code system, causing sharp increases in costs but sanctioning various increases in prices, steel producers have been reluctant to talk about the "pay point," which some hopeful individuals, early this year, were disposed to set at 30 to 35 per cent for the best positioned steel companies. Producers feel that the pay point has been raised, also that favorable commitments they might make on the subject could be used against them should a close scrutiny of steel prices be undertaken by Washington.

Assuming for discussion a pay point at 40 per cent, that is, production of steel ingots at 40 per cent of the present reported capacity, that would be a little over 27,000,000 tons of ingots a year, and the probability seems to be that such a rate will be attained by early March. It would not be so low a rate as appears by reference to capacity for it would be about 50 per cent of the efficient and modern capacity, 50 per cent of record annual production, in 1929, and 60 per cent of average production in the seven years through 1929, a very active period broken only by two lulls of about six months each, in 1924 and 1927. From this viewpoint the industry is fully entitled to make profits at what would be called a 40 per cent operation.

The market in heavy melting steel scrap has advanced a dollar a ton in the week, on very light buying by consumers while scrap has been notably scarce.

Quattlander Quits Hahn Stores Post

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—Paul Quattlander has resigned as president of the Hahn Department Stores, Inc., effective January 31.

Quattlander, also a director of the corporation, chairman of the executive committee, member of the finance committee, president of the Hahn Purchasing Corporation and a director of the 28 subsidiary companies, will relinquish all of these positions at the same ttime, he said.

He joined the Hahn stores in March of 1929 as executive vice president and was elected president in July, 1932.

Sugar Consumption Higher in Europe

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—Sugar consumption in 11 European countries for the first two months of the 1933-34 crop year totaled 62,322 tons, or 5½ per cent above a year ago, while production increased 268,819 tons, or 18.1 per cent compared with the previous year, according to B. W. Dyer & Co.

Stocks on November 1, 1933, were off 196,574 tons, or 7½ per cent, compared with November 1, 1932.

FLAWS FOUND IN PESSIMISTIC FORECAST

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—A widely known statistician has recently announced his opinion concerning the business outlook for 1934. Incidentally he looks for continued depression.

But the important point lies in his reasons. These are that continued uncertainty as to money and credit lie ahead, and that no solution for unemployment is in sight.

Now this man's conclusions may be right. His reasoning, however, is plainly incorrect and unsound. This should be emphasized, because one of the most discouraging features of our situation is the fact that so much of our analysis of causes is wrong that we continually try to use ineffective remedies.

UNEMPLOYMENT THEORIES

This statistician's reasoning about unemployment is as follows:

There are about ten million unemployed.

Of these, five million are producers of "goods" (material products), and five million are producers of "services" (shines and polishes, cooking, medical attention, etc.). He includes clerical and transportation, labor in "services."

The unemployment of the service half is caused by the unemployment in the "goods" half, he says.

But practically all of the unemployment in the production of "goods" is in the production of "durable goods" (such as machinery, automobiles and buildings). There is very little among producers of "consumers' goods," he says—clothing, tires, gasoline, etc.

Therefore, he argues, what we need is to stimulate directly the production of durable goods. The great defect of the present program is the attempt to give purchasing power to consumers.

POINTS DISPUTED

This reasoning shows a complete misunderstanding of economics.

In the first place, there is no such distinction between "goods" and "services" as this statistician makes.

He classes all railway transportation, all clerical labor, and all persons in trade as producers of "service," not goods. But the accounting staff of a steel mill helps to produce steel and the trainmen and dealers who provide the finished steel where and when it is wanted are also producing steel. Such labor is as much engaged in producing goods as are miners and factory hands.

Therefore, it is untrue to say that the unemployment of one-half of the ten million is caused by the unemployment of the other half.

In the second place, there is no such distinction as he makes between "durable goods" and "consumers' goods." Automobiles and furniture are durable, but they are certainly also consumers' goods. So are houses.

The real distinction is between "capital goods" and "consumers' goods." Some capital goods are durable (factory buildings and machinery) and some are not (oil, fuel and many raw materials).

Consumers' goods are all finished goods for sale to ultimate consumers, and include automobiles and furniture as well as tires and clothing.

BUYING POWER NEEDED

It follows that not only is the classification used wrongly, but the conclusion based on it is wrong. If it were possible to create purchasing power artificially at all, an increase in consumer purchasing power would be exactly the thing to aim at.

Capital goods may be said to get their value from the consumers' goods they help to produce. The demand for factory building and machinery comes from the automobiles, furniture, etc., which are manufactured by their aid.

It is, therefore, perfectly valid to reason that whatever increases demand for consumers' goods also increases demand for capital goods.

The durability has nothing to do with the matter except that durable goods can accumulate and pile up in excess stocks.

As in all depressions, one great problem is how to get capital goods and laborers who work with them into action. This is the problem of "over-capacity." It can never be solved until consumers of all sorts can buy all sorts of consumers' goods, whether durable or not.

Let us not confuse the issue by making false distinctions.

COAL OUTPUT SHOWS GAIN

HARRISBURG, Dec. 16. —(AP.)—A 55 per cent gain in bituminous coal production for November and a 2 per cent increase in anthracite output, were reported by the Department of Mines.

Bituminous production last month was 7,668,000 net tons, as compared with 4,944,000 for October. The department's forecast of operating conditions for this month shows loss in production and working time, due to the closing of the lake shipping season.

Anthracite output was 4,806,000 tons, as against 4,711,000 for October and 4,271,000 for November last year. Of the 230 collieries available for operation, 88 worked either full or part time during November.

OPERATOR 13

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan production made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Capt. Mount's policemen of the Eleventh Precinct drove a ferocious mob into the houses, fought them from floor to floor, and clubbed them from the housetops into the yawning streets below. The mob caught Sergt. Ellison and were hanging him, when Capt. De Camp, of the Eighth Precinct, and his men tore into the rioters, smashing skulls and arms and ribs, beating a way out with the half-dead sergeant. Capt. Bryan's men of the Fourth Precinct charged the mob at Brooks' and at Lord and Taylor's, and killed or crippled hundreds of ruffians, littering the streets with their senseless bodies.

Capt. Greer and his men from the Chambers Street Stationhouse clubbed the murdering masses so mercilessly that they jumped to death from the housetops to escape the flailing locust club, and brave Capt. Warlow's bleeding, gasping men of the First Precinct, led by him and by Inspector Carpenter—just a few score against many infuriated thousands—stormed the rookeries from which the mob was shooting Negro women and little children, and battered them so terribly that the bawling, cursing wretches leaped down to self-destruction from balcony, window ledge and roof.

Vast Upheaval

Operator 13 at police headquarters sat huddled up at the long desk beside Commissioner Acton, where the police telegraphers were sending out telegraphic orders and receiving reports from every precinct police station on Manhattan Island. She wore the plain dark dress of a shopgirl—for to venture out upon the streets of New York well-dressed was to invite immediate death.

Because, from the beginning, whatever Southern agent had had a hand in this uprising had lost control of it at once. This was no strategic revolt; no revolution devised by honest desperation; no furious protest against continuing the war or against the draft. It was a vast upheaval of the city's underworld expressing deathless hatred for civilization and all its works and symbols and authority.

It was a determination to plunder and exterminate those better off, better educated, more fortunate; and the menace of compulsory military service by destroying all who enforced it—police, military, municipal officials, newspapers, and the hated rich and respectable—and, particularly, to burn the enrollment offices and massacre the Negro population — men, women and children—for whose freedom they believed the war was being fought.

If ever any Confederate agents, agitators, spies—if ever the secret rebel organizations of the Knights of the Golden Circle, or the Sons of Liberty—had had a hand in this revolt, they had lost all control of it from the beginning. And if any among them were attempting to regain control, that possibility was now the particular business of such United States secret service agents as remained in this distracted city, and who kept up telegraphic communication with the War Department in Washington and with Col. Sharpe at headquarters in the field.

One of these federal agents was Operator 13.

Often in Danger

She had passed through two fearful days and nights. Only her modest garb had saved her in the swarming, yelling crowds hunting for victims, where scores had been killed and robbed on the streets merely because they were respectably clothed. From the moment that the federal detective with her had shot Clive Andrews, she had been in the thick of it.

With secret service agents she had arrested Claire Quilter, Jessica West and Mrs. Dorn, and had escorted them aboard the Governor's Island tugboat on their journey to the squatty fort in the Narrows.

"I'm sorry," she said to the astonished Miss Quilter, with tears in her eyes, "but you are a Confederate courier yourself, and you understand that I had to do it. And I'm sure they will be very kind and polite to you at Castle William and Fort Lafayette."

Claire Quilter wept, too; and on the dock, kissed her melancholy captor goodbye. But Mrs. Dorn turned up her anemic nose and Jessica West swore at her.

Clive Andrews was dead; but Capt. Gailliard remained at large; and no wholesale arrests among Knights of the Golden Circle or Sons of Liberty had included that agile and slippery young man, so far. And now, at 300 Mulberry street, Operator 13 crouched over the desk beside Commissioner Acton, waiting for further telegraphic instructions from Col. Sharpe or for reports from Federal agents or from the police which might throw light on the activities and whereabouts of John Gailliard.

The girl was very tired and nervous. There were dark circles under her eyes and shadows on the pinched, white features. She had just finished a cup of coffee and a ham sandwich—which included everything she had eaten in 24 hours.

Through the continuous clicking of the telegraph instruments, receiving and sending messages fraught with life and death, she could hear cannon shots at intervals and the far, high-pitched fury of surging masses in Printing House Square; and, rarely a light volley of musketry where the handful of soldiers were battling for their lives.

Anxiety

Wires from the Central Office radiated to every one of the 32 precinct police stations, excepting those that had been burned down. The Sanitary Police under Inspector Dilks and Capt. Lord were at Headquarters.

Commissioner Thomas C. Acton, cool and composed, and his colleague, Gen. H. Brown, who was in command of the few troops available, were in evident anxiety concerning the safety of the Navy Yard, and particularly regarding the great ironclad ram, Dunderberg, not yet launched.

"The trouble is," said Acton to Operator 13, "Gen. Brown can spare only a small armed guard for the Dunderberg. I'm expecting to hear from them at any moment. You'd better remain here until I do."

"Yes, sir, I shall," said the girl nervously.

The Brigadier smiled reassuringly at the pallid, slender youngster in black who was desperately absorbed in preparing a telegram to Col. Sharpe in cipher.

Now, having finished enciphering, she handed it over to an expert military telegrapher from the provost's office; and in a second or two it had started over the wire. Deciphered, it read:

The mob is in full possession of the city. There are only 2,000 metropolitan police and 500 soldiers here, including those on furlough and invalids. All the New York and Brooklyn militia regiments are at Gettysburg. Urge the War Department to send them home.

Thousands of people here have been killed; the city is afire in 50 different places, and if a wind rises, Manhattan Island will burn to bed rock.

Some of the battalions of the fire department have sided with the mob; some are passively disloyal. But the engine companies under Decker are fearless and devoted.

All ships of war under repair and building are in grave danger of destruction.

It is impossible to say exactly how this terrible riot began. No doubt Southern agents aided it. One of them, Confederate Secret Service Agent Clive Andrews, was shot and killed by one of our operators. Claire Quilter, courier and spy; Jessica West, Rebel agent, and a Mrs. Dorn, suspected, are under arrest. I sent them to Fort Hamilton en route to Fort Lafayette. There is no trace at all in this conspiracy of Capt. Gailliard so far, I await further orders from you.

OPERATOR 13.

In an incredible short time a telegram, in answer, came in, clickity-click, from Col. Sharpe:

Glad you got Andrews. Turn Mrs. Dorn loose and send Miss Quilter and Miss West to the Old Capitol prison.

Keep after Gailliard. There is another dangerous spy with him named Cleburne—a Confederate naval lieutenant—who is likely to attempt to destroy the shipping. Try your best to arrest or kill these two Confederate secret service agents.

All the New York City regiments have now been ordered to New York and are already on the cars. The 7th Infantry should arrive tonight. Inform the local authorities.

This was an open telegram. The girl handed it to Acton. The brigadier also read it over his shoulder.

"I wish the 7th Regiment would hurry," he said quietly. "If the mob starts for the Navy Yard we can't stop them."

Vulnerable Spot

"They can burn the river front and all the commercial shipping, also," said Acton—"even if we turn the guns of Governor's Island on them. Only—they don't seem to know it."

"Some fellow like this rebel naval officer, Cleburne, will start them pretty soon," remarked the brigadier.

At that moment a message came from the Twenty-ninth Precinct Police Station: "They are turning Negroes out of their houses in Thirty-second street.

Acton replied: "Is there much trouble?"

"Yes," came the answer, "they are hanging a Negro to a tree in Thirty-second street. Send us aid."

BOER WAR—DASH ON LADYSMITH

British trade expansion in South Africa met with stubborn resistance from the Boer states, Transvaal and Orange, precipitating the Boer war (1899-1902). After much sacrifice the Boers were defeated, the conquered Boer states becoming British colonies. In 1910 they were federated with the neighboring Cape Colony and Natal as the Union of South Africa.

HEATING PLANT WITH OIL FIRING

Furnace oil, a by-product of mineral oil refining, is convenient fuel for a clean, automatic heating plant. Oil is broken up into fine particles, mixed with air and introduced at bottom of furnace or boiler. If oil-air mixture is proper, almost complete combustion takes place in the furnace, liberating about 19,000 B. T. U. of heat per pound of oil burned. Air and oil are introduced under pressure by fuel pump, airblower (fan) driven by electric motor. Oil burner can be attached to every coal furnace, by removing grates and insulating ash-pan with fire brick. Above: Oil burner installation. Right: Two different types of burners. (General Science)

TAM O'SHANTER AND THE WITCHES

". . . Coffins stood round like open presses,
"That show'd the dead in their last dresses
"And by some devilish cantrip slight,
"Each in its cauld hand held a light."

Robert Burns (1759-1796), the peasant poet, whose humor, sincerity of feeling, sympathy with all passions of man expressed in his poems, made him the greatest and most popular lyricist of Scotland. Among his creations: Tam O'Shanter, Highland Mary. Many of them are set to music. His short span of life was a continuous struggle with poverty. (English Literature)

IRON ALLOYS

Pure iron is little used, alloys having more valuable properties. Carbon content greatly influences its characteristics, hence iron alloys are classified generally by it: Wrought iron (0.06-0.15%C), steel (0.1-2%C), cast iron (2.5-3.75%C). Above 900°C. iron combines with carbon as cementite (Fe_3C), which remains dissolved in the steel when cooled suddenly, giving hardness (temper by quenching). Cooled slowly, pure iron (ferrite) separates at about 700°C. forming pearlite (layers of ferrite and cementite), lending toughness. Above: Photo-micrographs of iron alloys, taken under the microscope from a ground, polished, acid-etched surface showing designs conclusive for chemical and physical properties. (Chemistry)

Some More Recipes

Charming housewives all over the nation are writing in for some more of our hotel chef recipes for fireless cooking with sherry and port.

First, of all, girls, we don't believe in pouring new wine into old sinks.

Don't forget that alcohol will make lamps explode and that waffles grilled in Napoleon brandy are liable to get the conqueror's complex. Italy is the home of wines. When in Italy, on his first trip, Napoleon was a full general. But, then, so were the colonels.

Put the history to one side and let it cool. We will take up butter cakes, en casserole. The recipe comes straight down from the hospitable Borgias who entertained lavishly while waiting for their antique furniture to ripen on the vine.

Make a batter of flour. Pour a brass-hooped hogshead of Spanish percussion wine into the batter. Give all the neighbors a taste of the batter and watch the battering really start. You commence this meal by yelling, "Batter up."

It's healthy, invigorating and indorsed by the pure food committee during two of their periodic attacks of daily indigestion. If you dine in a very small breakfast alcove we suggest limiting the orchestra to 24 men and making them park the bass drum outside. They have some very good cooking wines in Africa. Remind us to make that trip.

If you really feel like slamming a door don't overlook finan haddie swimming in Chateau Debris, vintage of 1914. Chateau Debris is the finest of the sparkling Burgundies from the old Babylonian hanging gardens. The ancient Egyptian insurance companies complained that the rate of self-effacement was four hanging Babylonians to a garden.

But how are you going to know the secret of good food if not prepared properly? Pouring gasoline into the stove and whisky into the frying pan should make it exciting if ever the twain shall meet. May we never ogle the day when we shall see a granddaughter of ours staggering home from cooking school. What a thought.

These two recipes for breakfast are not numerous, but they are valuable. And, with careful marketing and thoughtful preparation, should last a small family until lunch.

Space does not permit publishing the names of our testimonial correspondents. They were quite a few. But, we feel sure we will get more letters when the other delighted students recover.

In the meantime, we are working out a new theory for chocolate cake smothered in juniper berries and rum. Our architect favors the flat arch with steel rods reinforcing the chocolate. We just can't figure out how it can be eaten off the premises.

The Leaven Is Working

Plans for Modernization of Local Government Gain Support—Comment On Local News.

Proposals to modernize local government by consolidating political subdivisions no longer needed in these days of swift transportation steadily gain support. Attorney General William A. Schnader recommended, for instance, in an address to the Law Academy of Philadelphia, that the Constitution be revised to permit consolidation of small counties.

Pennsylvania has 29 counties whose population is less than that of McKeesport, 14 that are smaller than Wilkinsburg. Yet each of these counties has its commissioners, sheriff, coroner and other officials whom the taxpayers must support. Let these small counties be merged with other counties, and the people would still be able to go to the Courthouse in less time than was required in oxcart days, when the counties were formed.

Right here in Allegheny County, according to Charles C. McGovern, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, we have an excessive number of political offices and "bureaus fixed by the Legislature that call for tremendous amounts of the taxpayers' money for operations that are duplications, overlapping, and entirely unnecessary under our present form of government."

Allegheny County, Col. McGovern says, "is heading straight for the financial rocks," but can be saved by the elimination of needless governmental agencies, and only in that way. This statement, formally presented by the head of the county government at the opening of the 1934 budget sessions, cannot fail to impress all thoughtful citizens.

The city government, too, needs modernization. The Western Pennsylvania Branch of the National Economy League asserts that duplicate real estate assessments are responsible for $360,000 of our huge deficit. The league pertinently remarks that to have the city assess real estate after it has already been assessed by the county is about as sensible as it would be for a man to pay his barber for shaving him twice at the same time.

*Even if the program for the special session per-*mitted it, it is probably out of the question to look to the present Legislature for modernization of local government. It has too many reactionaries in its membership. But in a few months candidates will be nominated who will sit in the Legislature at the next regular session. There is encouragement to believe that action can be obtained through them.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot is reported to intend to call the Senate back into another special session if it fails during the present session to pass on the five appointments to the Public Service Commission. The Governor would be justified in such a course. The Senate's refusal either to confirm or reject the appointments is inexcusable from any standpoint.

Inexcusable, too, has been the Senate's attempt to dodge votes on social legislation by burying the bills in committee. Fortunately there are signs that the force of public opinion is beginning to make an impression. The outlook for housing legislation is more encouraging, and there is a good chance that the Child Labor Amendment to the United States Constitution will be ratified.

The Department of Justice has obtained a verdict of guilty in the United States District Court in another election fraud case. An enormous mass of incriminating testimony has been presented in these cases; and the question arises, Why did not District Attorney Andrew T. Park gather this evidence and lay it before a grand jury in the Quarter Sessions Court?

The charge of fraud was raised immediately after the 1932 election. It was shouted from the housetops. But Park instituted no prosecutions, notwithstanding that in 1931, on the eve of his own election, he specifically promised that if returned to office he would vigorously prosecute not only election cheaters but also those who paid or procured them to cheat.

The state courts are the normal vehicle through which to proceed against election crooks. The prosecution of such cases in the federal courts is distinctly unusual, and the federal prosecutor is hampered by the fact that convictions must be based solely on evidence of crookedness in the election of federal officials. District Attorney Park would operate under no such handicap.

*District Attorney Park must be credited with vig-*orous prosecution of those who violated the elections laws in 1931. Scores of the crooks were convicted or pleaded guilty, only to be turned loose through the leniency of the judges. This may explain Park's failure to proceed actively against the election cheaters of the following year, but it does not excuse it.

*The Allegheny County Medical Society is con-*cerned over the question, Who is to be Director of Health in Mayor-elect W. N. McNair's administration? The society and half a dozen of the other leading medical and health organizations have asked for the retention of Dr. W. W. McFarland. Dr. McFarland is not a politician, and it is to be hoped that Mr. McNair will adhere to the course that was followed in the appointment of Dr. McFarland and his immediate predecessors and keep the position out of politics.

*The Salvation Army announces plans for a Christ-*mas tree, entertainment and presents for 1,000 poor children at its headquarters on Saturday, December 23. Christmas dinners are to be served to a great many needy families, too. This is a program that must win the approval of everyone with a spark of human kindness in his make-up. It deserves cordial support.

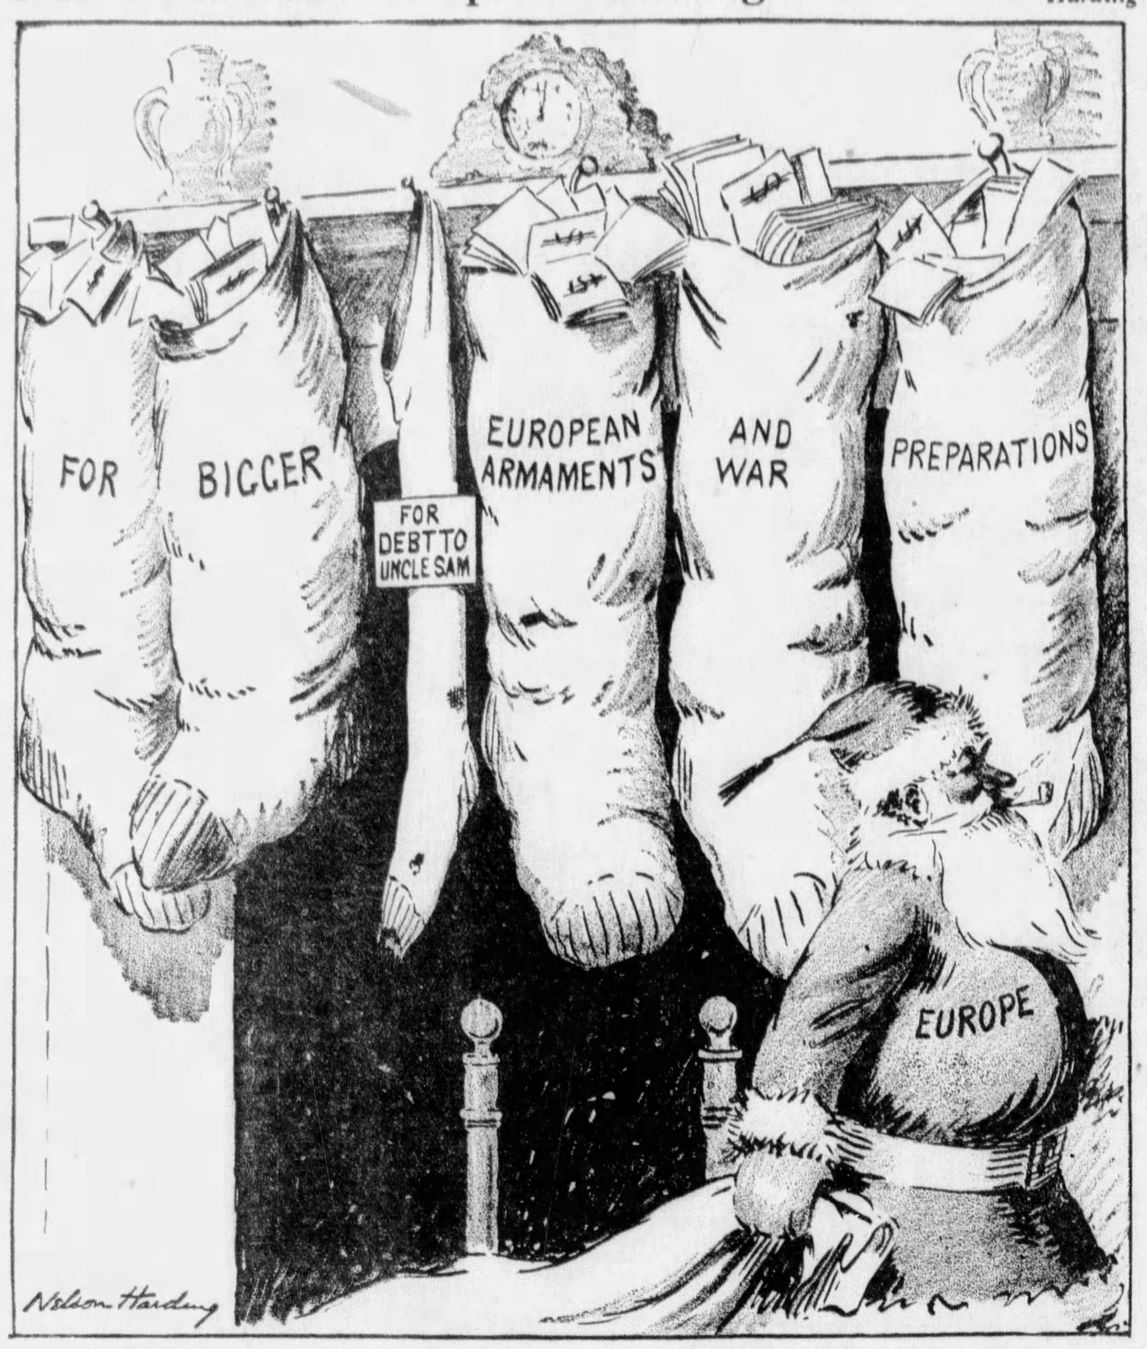
The state has arranged to make small payments to physicians and nurses for taking care of the indigent unemployed, which is no more than just. Hospitals, however, apparently are expected to continue to give free service to those unable to pay, for the state appropriations are wholly inadequate to cover the cost of charity service.

Miss Jessie Turnbull, president of the Hospital Association of Pennsylvania, asks for the appropriation of extra funds to take care of charity patients and warns that the hospitals cannot stand the threatened new burdens. It is a shame that the hospitals should be so crippled at a time when there is such need of free service. If any of them should be forced to close, it would be little short of tragic.

We trust the misfortune threatening the hospitals will be averted, and we also hope we shall be spared the potential catastrophes described in tomorrow's issue of the American Weekly, the magazine distributed with the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. One article pictures ways in which the world may end, while another vividly describes what is likely to occur if there is another great war.

Old World Santa Skips a Stocking

By Nelson Harding



The European Santa Claus
Now makes his Christmas rounds,
And fills the stockings to the brim
With lire, francs and pounds.

Except one stocking that he skips,
And which is hung in vain.
Perhaps it is an oversight:
Will Santa please explain?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 16.—I've been wool-gathering an hour. Alternating a devil's tattoo on the desk with soulful window gazing. I rise momentarily into the higher slopes only to go landing into the bottomless pit. Reading Abbe Dimnet and Coleridge lack the usual soothe.

It's one of those days. Darkly grey and brooding. With a crash, all life's merry optimisms go suddenly roaring into the crevasse. Grandma called them "the vapours." The Victorians, "the blues." Psychiatrists, "intensified moods."

Whatever the name, they're no fun! If Santa Claus came bounding through the window, I'd merely give him the pawnbroker's eye and inquire: "What do you want—you old faker?" There's nothing to evoke such pensiveness. I sang "O, Sole Mio" in the bath and wolfed a stack of wheats a whippet could not hurdle.

Even Karl Kitchen popping in as I inserted paper in the typewriter to twit: "Preparing to fire another blank, eh?" had no effect. I was still light and airy—a feather on the wind. The mail was pleasant. The dog in unusual caper. The goose, tra la, hung high.

* * *

Then I began tapping out the first few words of a feuilleton about the crowds I saw when a liner sailed the other dawn, the latest I've stayed up since abandoning just-one-more-roodle at Harry Staton's poker games. But I snagged, snatched the paper from the machine and the black curtain fell. I tried again. Again and again. No dice. I was and am mentally hamstrung.

* * *

I try to argue it's the weather. But I love slatey days. I'll take a fog on the Strand to a blue lagoon and lambent moon on Lake Como. Last evening I saw a caricature outraging Clifton Webb's deep-dish profile in the New Yorker and howled. I resurrected it, looked, shrugged and tossed it away. An old letter of George Ade's from Miami, always good for a chuckle, did not even flush up a sick grin. I turned on the radio. A honey-voiced lady was extolling a fish sauce.

* * *

Often in one of those imperfect cadences that ripple existence with an indigo blue I wash out a handkerchief. I read Mark Twain used to do that and break the thread of a funk. It sunk me deeper. I began thinking perhaps I was living too much with myself. A little more clack and canter. I'd go to "No. 21" and mingle with the gay luncheon crowds. But it ditched me lower than ever. So sunk I seemed to sense the faint aroma of China.

* * *

I called up Mickey Nielan who usually rates at least one laugh. I told him I was lower than a slew worm and could walk under a cuspidor wearing a high hat. "Go get a bust in the arm. You look dopey to me, anyhow," was all the comfort I could wangle from that mug.

* * *

So I wandered about the apartment. Before the goldfish bowl, the occupants seemed to be gasping jeers. As much as to snigger: "And they call us poor fish!" I fingered rows of books, searching for some bright tome that might twang a responsive chord. There seemed to be nothing but Gray's "Elegy," "Death In The Afternoon" and such. Even the icebox whose racks held chilled butter beans and a cold chine of beef was uninviting. And when one can't tingle to such edibles the business of happiness comes to a full stop.

* * *

In desperation I fled to a neighboring news reel featuring a new Mickey Mouse. But still that cloying droop. I have thought of toying with several ideas. But all I want to write about is gloom, dark clouds of it, swooping and destroying. The old man with the scythe motif. There is no balm in Gilead. Maybe there's not even a Gilead.

* * *

At my time of life I should be fretting about the Futility Of It All. At 3 o'clock in the afternoon other men are under a shower in the club locker and telling their men to have the dingey ready for a yachting to town. But here I am crouched over a typewriter, one of journalism's passive participles, wondering what calamity is to engulf the world. Calamity? A second, I know! Christmas is coming. Maybe that has been the matter all day!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Sentimentality Is a Vicious Racket

I've said this before. I'll say it again. If I have a torch song, this is it.

I DESPISE SENTIMENTALITY.

And I firmly believe that sentimentality has harmed and retarded human progress more than all the crime in history.

Sentiment — that's different. Sentiment is not sentimentality. Sentiment is a sensitive appreciation of, 'a reverence for, the true and beautiful. And that is the basis of all spiritual development.

But strange things can and do happen to sentiment when our cowardice and conceit get busy. Then subtly, insidiously—so subtly and insidiously that we do not even know that a change has taken place—sentiment may become an alibi instead of an appreciation; a racket instead of a reverence.

When that happens to any character, there's the devil to pay. For sentimentality offers a 100 per cent excuse for the most vicious forms of cruelty and crookedness. Not only does it offer an excuse, but it actually makes 'em look like virtues.

For example, it's noble SENTIMENT to love your country. But it's dangerous SENTIMENTALITY to love your country blindly just because it is your country, to refuse to see its glaring faults, to brand as traitor anyone who will try to show you those faults.

Such popeyed participation is more dangerous to a country than open treachery.

Proceeding further and getting meaner . . . it's tender SENTIMENT to love and respect fathers and mothers, if and when they are noble, kindly, wise fathers and mothers. But it's outrageous SENTIMENTALITY to reverence all parents merely because they have reproduced their species.

So have rattlesnakes. But nobody's pinning carnations on them. It isn't the birth-ordeal that counts, but the subsequent performance. And the subsequent performance of a lot of parents makes a rattlesnake look like a turtle-dove by comparison.

Such blind adulation of marriage and married people does not uphold the "sanctity of the home." It outrages that sanctity. It makes a mockery of home life. It has brought marriage to the brink of the abyss.

FOR TRUTH WILL OUT!

You can cover a cesspool with wreaths of roses—and bribe the Board of Health to pass you by. But presently the whole world will know that you're maintaining a nuisance. And sooner or later you'll have to face the consequences.

Why is America haywire today? Because generations of sentimental Americans have insisted that nothing was, or could be, wrong with America and American institutions.

Why doesn't the world go ahead faster, now that we've taken our beating? Because cowards, pinheads and self-serving politicians are holding us back with sentimental slogans about "the good old days"—the "sanctity of the Constitution"—and other moldy mouthings.

Why are our courts filled with shameful records of individual corruptions and cruelty? Because the Sentimentalists are there to defend such records with their pretty palaver!

But why should Sentimentality flourish when its viciousness is repeatedly exposed?

BECAUSE IT'S INFINITELY EASIER FOR OUR LAZY, COWARDLY, CONCEITED HUMAN NATURE TO POSE AND PRETEND THAN TO BE HONEST AND BRAVE.

And if you doubt it, just turn the Lie Detector on a few of your own pet Sentimentalities, stranger. Or even on a few of mine!

IF I HAD TO CHOOSE BETWEEN DEALING WITH A DOWNRIGHT CROOK OR A SENTIMENTALIST, I'D CHOOSE THE CROOK EVERY TIME.

Out and out crime is an obvious thing. Thieves, kidnapers, murderers, forgers, lynchers, dope dealers are all Bad Eggs and you know it. Their deeds are classified—you can tell them where to head in.

But the Sentimentalist is an equally Bad Egg—and usually neither you nor the Sentimentalist himself knows it.

So I'm all for exposing Sentimentality.

And will that not make me popular?

Yes, stranger, it will NOT! But you can only die once. And this is a swell cause. So here goes!

A Dude Rancher's Complaint—Clergymen Without Jobs—The Drama of Football

By Edwin C. Hill

A COWBOY'S lament comes to us from Billings, Mont. Dude Rancher I. H. Larom rises to remark that dude ranching is headed for the last round-up if the craze for modernization continues at its present pace.

Mr. Larom hails from Valley, Wyo., and is president of the Dude Ranchmen's Association. Addressing the convention of his associates, he told them that the customers of this newly-developed business, which runs into many millions a year, are demanding heated swimming pools, golf courses and breakfasts in bed, effete luxuries which scarcely belong to the great open spaces where men are men.

Such things, mourns Mr. Larom, are killing the goose which lays the golden egg. Let's get back, pleads Mr. Larom, to the real old West of the six-gallon hat, the bucking bronchos, the spurs and the chaps, with a plunge into the creek or into some ice-cold spring for the morning dip.

These dude ranches enjoy a wide vogue, although they really got started only about 20 years ago when a Pittsburgher, with a ranch near Yellowstone Park, thought he could keep a surplus of friends and acquaintances away from his ranch by announcing that he would have to charge for accommodations. His scheme had just the opposite effect. Quite willing to pay, easterners came in droves and forced him into the hotel business.

Perceiving a good thing, ranchers all over the West went into the unique business, and today they raise not only hay, alfalfa, cattle and horses, but also raise up bankers and brokers and dowagers and debutantes to be amateur cow punchers. Something like 10,000 dudes a season hit the long trail to the land where the deer and the antelope frisk upon the rolling prairies, and from which Mr. Larom would firmly banish tennis racquet and niblick.

20,000 Clergymen Are Without Jobs

A STARTLING item in the news, that 20,000 ordained ministers of the gospel in these United States are out of work, hundreds of them in desperate case and many dependent on charity for their daily bread. The Rev. Dr. John Clover Monsma, writing in "Good Housekeeping," finds many ministers in the bread lines.

For thousands of the best and most scholarly ministers the outlook is bleak and grim. A great many churches have closed their doors. Salaries have been reduced to mere pittances. Only 1 per cent of all the men who preach the word of God receive $4,000 or more, a year. Nearly 33 per cent receive $1,000 to $1,500. Nearly 13 per cent receive $500 or less. On that they are expected to keep sinners in the paths of rectitude and raise families.

A queer civilization and an inexplicable country, when all this can be true and when at the same time tribute of more than $1,000,000,000 a year is paid to professional racketeers and criminals.

Football, Greatest Provider of Drama

PROFESSIONAL sport enters the winter doldrums, with little to lift the blood pressure of the customers except professional hockey and college basketball. Football came to a crashing climax on a thousand gridirons after one of the most successful seasons in many years. There remains only the great inter-sectional contest which will be held in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena on New Year's Day.

Of all outdoor sports, football undoubtedly provides the most drama, the most stirring background. People surge through the turnstiles of football stadiums not so much for devotion to a game whose intricacies comparatively few understand, but in expectation of the thrill of the unexpected, of the drama which so often springs from the accidental incidents exploding from enormous masses.

The mind of this writer goes winging back through the years to the most spectacular of such casual incidents; to the late afternoon of a November day just before we entered the Great War. The stage of drama was the Polo Grounds in New York City. Army against Navy. Sixty thousands in the stands.

In their special box, warily guarded by Secret Service men, sat the President of the United States and the lady he had just taken to be his wife—Woodrow Wilson and Edith Bolling Galt Wilson.

The day grim and severe with sometimes a flutter of snow and sometimes a whiff and whimper of rain, until, sometime before the end of the game was due, it was difficult to perceive, in the thickening murk and gloom, the figures of the mud-stained gladiators.

One followed the game by ear rather than by eye. Out of the mysterious haze came groans, and grunts, and growls, and the straining suspirations of young giants in headlong strife. All this heavily punctuated by the dull thump and thud of the kicked ball.

And presently a miracle was born and grew to a full flower of beauty. For, back in the stands, someone had the inspiration to strike a match and make a little pin-point of light in the enveloping gloom. His neighbor imitated the gesture and quickly others lit matches and held them up, and finally matches were being lit by the thousand and the tens of thousands and held up, until all around the great oval at least 40,000 people were holding aloft little pin-points of light. It was like a world of fireflies suddenly arrested in flight, held suspended.

So the President must have thought, for, turning to his lady, he spoke in a voice which carried widely:

"Look, look, my dear! Beautiful! The most beautiful picture I ever saw!"

Congress Aiming Blow At 'Exempt' Securities

By James T. Williams, Jr.

CONGRESS is getting ready to aim another blow at the forces of special privilege in an effort to break their vicelike grip on the throat of government, federal, state and local.

This blow will take the form of legislative proposals at the coming session to tax all outstanding federal, state and municipal securities which are tax exempt under existing law.

It is estimated that these securities, which are now exempt from all taxation, total approximately $40,000,000,000.

Senator Lonergan, of Connecticut, believes that the income from these securities, if they could be taxed uniformly under the present federal rate, would approximate annually between $140,000,000 and $150,000,000.

The addition of this amount of federal revenue would enable the federal government to transfer some of the tax burden now borne by earned incomes to unearned incomes.

Congress would have abolished the exemption from taxation of federal, state and municipal securities some time ago had Senators and Representatives in Congress been able to convince themselves that this could be done by legislation and without amending the federal Constitution.

Sentiment Changing In Congress

NEW evidence of the extent to which the present depression is making the American people tax conscious appears in the rapidly changing sentiment among the members of both houses regarding the power of Congress to provide by legislation for the abolition of tax exempt securities.

Among the prominent senators who admit a change of mind on this matter since the last session is Senator Ashurst, of Arizona, the diligent chairman of the Committee of the Judiciary. He no longer thinks it necessary to amend the Constitution in order to subject tax-exempt securities to taxation. He now thinks this can be done by legislation. On this point he recently declared:

"I have reached the definite conclusion that the language of the Sixteenth Amendment leaves no doubt that Congress can deal with this matter. This amendment reads: 'Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes on income from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several states, and without regard to any census enumeration.'"

Another able senator who favors action by Congressional legislation to repeal the exemption from taxation of federal, state and municipal securities is Senator Borah, ranking member of the Committee on Foreign Relations.

As the senior senator from Tennessee, Mr. Hull, now Secretary of State, was an ardent advocate of abolishing tax-exempt securities and offered a resolution to amend the constitution in order to bring this about.

When he was Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Mellon took the same stand. So did President Coolidge, who sent a message to Congress on the subject, in which he said:

"The existing system not only permits a large amount of the wealth of the nation to escape its just burden, but acts as a continual stimulant to municipal extravagance. All the wealth of the nation ought to contribute its fair share to the expense of the nation."

Strong Argument By Longworth

THE late Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House, made a strong argument to the same effect, in the course of which he said:

"A man who earns his income, or derives it from investment in any industrial enterprise or something that gives employment to labor, or produces things which are of vital interest to the American people, has to pay a tax. But the man who puts his money into nontaxable securities and whose only work is to deposit the check in his bank account, is absolutely free from any taxation whatever.

"The worst vice of it all is that slowly but surely earned incomes are paying more and more of the cost of government and unearned incomes are day by day getting rid of any tax whatever. That is utterly and absolutely vicious. No other country permits any such thing to exist. On the contrary, most enlightened countries discriminate in favor of earned incomes. Great Britain does, France does Japan does, and a number of other countries do."

The signs of the times indicate that the United States will join this group of enlightened countries at the next session of Congress. Then the United States Supreme Court will make the final decision as to whether Congress has the power to end the tax-exempt securities "racket," or whether the American people must await the ratification of an amendment to the Constitution for the relief that such a change will bring them.
